While a great deal has been published about

GREAT GEORGIA WONDER

SPEEDY AND PERMANENT RELIEF

Afforded to many who have suffered from Rheumatism!

Kidney Diseases! Insomnia!

Dyspepsia! Diseases Peculiar to Women! Loss of Appetite!

Nervous Prostration! General Debility

Prof. J. R. Blake, Sr., of Greenwood, S. C

Prof. J. R. Blake, Sr., of Greenwood, S. C recently visited the resort, and gives the result of his observations in the following extract clipped from the Greenwood Tribune:

The curative value of the place for some diseases is very remarkable. Rheumatism, dyspepsia, paralysis and some forms of nervousness were signally relieved in individuals coming under my personal observation; one young man from McCormick, S. C., who had been prostrated for seventeen months by deranged digestion, was thoroughly cured, gaining eighteen pounds in one month. An elderly gentleman from Penfield, Ga., who had been partially paralyzed on one side for eight years, arrived at the shaft in the same hack with myself. His right hand was disabled, and he walked with great difficulty when he arrived, but after six days in the shaft he could write letters to his family, and walked with comparative ease about the grounds. Many such cases are reported by reliable persons familiar with the history of the place.

Now as to the remedial agencies at work in effecting these wonderful cures, I must speak with more caution. A very common impression pravailing at a distance is that five relief effecting these wonderful tures, I must speak with more caution. A very common impression prevailing at a distance is that the relief afforced partakes of the nature of the "faith cures" of which we hear so much; but no one can remain long at the place without being convinced that this hypothesis is indefensible. In many cases cures come to the incredulous, and in spite of all the laws of faith. The prevailing theory among the visitors at the shaft is that the effect is produced from electricity derived from the walls and earth floor of the rooms. To test this belief in some practical form I made the following experiment: Two No. 16 copper wires, each 12 feet long, were inserted into the walls at opposite corners of shaft No. 1. In the absence of a scientific gal-No. 16 copper wires, each 12 feet long, were inserted into the walls at opposite corners of shaft No. 1. In the absence of a scientific galvometer, I introduced into the circuit of these wires several of the most equable and self-poised patients who were present, to see if they could detect any current from the wall through the wires. Six persons were introduced in succession, and all except one claimed to feel in the wires the same tingling sensations which they derived directly from the wall. Of course, excited imagination and nervous irritability are unknown quantities which cannot be eliminated from this problem, so long as the human system is employed in its solution, but it is scarcely credible that so many reliable and sober persons would be mistaken in identifying the sensation derived from the wires with the sensation given by the walls. There is much difficulty still remaining in this problem, as to the origin of the electricity, the irregular fitful way in which it acts, and many other points suggested by the abnormal conditions of the case.

Among the remedial agencies at work, the excellent mineral water cannot be overlooked, indeed, I was at first disposed to ascribe all the cures chiefly to this agent, which is obtained in abundance from pumps in the corners of the chafts, and freely used by the patients.

Washington, Ga., January 23, 1888.—Mr.

Washington, Ga., January 23, 1888.—Mr. James A. Benson, President: I certify that for ten years I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, which became very much aggravated in the last two or three years. At times I was confined to my bed and house; was unable to walk without crutches, and was compelled to give up all work. My sufferings were intense. I applied to different doctors for relief, but experienced none from their treatment. Last summer I visited the Electric Health Resort at Hillman, and after staying there awhile and drinking the Electric Waters, my rheumatism was entirely cured, and I have not had the slightest return of it. It gives me great pleasure to testify to the great healing properties of this wonderful place and its waters, and nothing that I could say would too strongly express my confidence in its virtues.

EDWARD BONNER.

Washington, Ga., January 19.—Mr. Jamse A. Benson, President: I take pleasure in bearing testimony to the remarkable virtues of the Electric Health Resort. My little daughter, Bessie, 10 years old, had an attack of a very serious nature, affecting her neck, in June last.

Alarmed at her condition, I had her treated by the most skillful physicians in this place and Atlanta, who used artificial electricity and other remedies. In September she was still suffering, and no change perceptible, when, as a last resort, we went to the electric shaft. She only went twice. The first visit improved her, and the second night she remained all night in the rooms, and came home completely restored and has remained so. These are facts, and I state them with no other object than to inform others suffering as did my little girl of the wonderful virtues of this resort. JAS. F. JACKSON.

Mr. B. F. Brown: Dea Sir—This certifies that during last May I was stricken with evere nervous prostration, was confined to my room for three months, and to my bed for the greater part of the time. About he 20th of August I went to the 'Hillman shaft' (Electric Resort,) and after spending our days there found that I was completely ured, and have been entirely well ever since hen. The cure in my case was a great wonter to me and my friends, and I am a strong eliever in the virtues of the place.

(Signed) Mrs. J. K. Durst, Greenwood, S. C. January 23, 1888.

Arp Tells Some Good Stories on Politicians.

How, Zeb Vance Explained His Religious ligious Faith—A Trick Played 'n Walton County.

When a man travels abroad and mixes with strangers and would be treated with civility he should not do anything or say anything that runs against their opinions, their interests or their prejudices. Zeb Vance said that one their prejudices. Zeb vance said that the time away back when he was running for congress against Holden he had to go over a mountain range and down into a valley where he had never been before. The humble people in that valley were almost cut off and hid out from the rest of the world, and especially from that side of the world in which Mr. Vance from that side of the world in which Mr. Vance lived. He knew nothing about their politics or their religion. "North Carolina is a curious state," said he. "Her religion is speckled and spotted like it had the measles. In one valley you will find the people all Episcopalians however poor or primitive. The ancestors or first settlers came from old England and brought that religion with them, and, as nobody moved in or moved out, their descendants kept the faith of their fathers. In another valley you will find them all Presbyterians, because the ancestors came from Scot-land. In another they will be all Methodists or all Baptists, and every one of these separate communities will have an old patriarch workor all Baptists, and every one of these separate communities will have an old patriarch working in the lead, and he is looked upon as the bell-wether of the flock. Now, it is necessary that a politician should know the religious faith of those with whom he is 'lectioneering' for votes. If he-can't chime in with-it exactly he musent say anything 'agin' it. 'Now,' said Vance, 'when I got over into the valley to meet my appointment, I found about seventy-five of the humble sovereigns gathered at the cross-roads where there was a little store and a wagon shop and a meetinghouse. They had on their home-made clothes and were standing around chawing tobacco and talking about 'craps' and waiting for me to come. I soon got familliar with them and got them in first-rate humor but as Holden was to come over in a day or two I wanted to fix things in some way so that he could'ent unfix them. Holden was a Methodist and I was afraid that these people were. I noticed an old man sitting off on a chunk and marking in the sand with his long walking stick. He had on big brass spectacles and his heavy shaggy eyebrows and big long nose indicated character and so I set him down as the bell-wether of the flock. After while I got up close to him and was about to address him when he gave a prayerful grunt and got up and braced himself on his stick and looking at me said in a solemn voice, "This is Mr. Vance I believe," "Yes sir" said I, giving him my hand. "And I am Emanual Stenok said he and I suppose you have come over the mounting to talk to my boys about their votes." "Yes, sir," said I, "that is my principal business and I—" well, Mr. Vance, allow me to ax you what church do, you belong to?"
"Certainly sir," said I; "certainly. Well, Mr. Vance, allow me to ax you what church do, you belong to?"
"Well, that was a sockdologer and it come in the stream of the stream of the surface of the flock of the come."

"Well, that was a sockdologer and it come "Well, that was a sockdologer and it come right straight at me, and for a moment I was demoralized, but I rallied, and as the boys had all gethered around to hear the old man put me through, I cleared my throat and said: "That is a fair question, my friend; a fair question, and I will tell you about that. My grandfather came from England, and as over there the established church was Episcopalian, of course he was an Episconalian."

there the established church was Episcopalian, of course he was an Episcopalian."

I paused a moment to see the effect of this, but there was none that was favorable. The old man marked a little more in the sand and spit his tobacco away off on one side. So I continued: "But my grandmother came from Scotland, and you know that John Knox left his mark upon that whole nation, and so of course she grew up a Preshyterian. Knox left his mark upon that whole nation, and so of course she grew up a Presbyterian. I paused again, but there was no sign, no awakening, no chord struck, and the old man marked some more in the sand. "But my friend, my father was born and grew up in a Methodist community, who were in this country, and converted by John Wesley, and, of course, he became a Methodist." I thought that now I had him sure, but I didn't. There was no sign of sympathy from him or the boys, and so I took my last shot. "But my good old mother, sir, was born and raised a Baptist, and it's always been my opinion that a man has got to go under the water before he can get to heaven." A gleam of satisfaction spread all over the old man's face as he said: "Give me your hand, Brother Vance. Boys, I told you so; I told you that he were a Baptist afore he come. He is the man. You can all vote for him, but Holden won't do nary time for they do say that he is one of afore he come. He is the man. You can all vote for him, but Holden won't do nary time for they do say that he is one of these shouten, cavortin Methodists."

I was thinking about this when I arrived at Anniston and Ironaton and Tennifer and all these iron towns, and where I found every man, woman and child red hot for protection It is not healthy for a man to talk free trade down here—and he must not say much about tariff reform or cut rates. These people say 'let well enough alone,' and I don't blame them, for there is more life and thrift and industry and happiness around these furnaces than anywhere I have been. Anniston has now ten thousand inhabitants and is increasing fifty per cent a year. The signs of a vigorous prosperity are all about. The hotel next the depot has just added sixty rooms, and is crowded all the time. The new compress handled twenty thousand bales of cotton the past season. A grand union depot is going up. The great southern car works are established with a million dollars capital and many new plants and enterprises are projected. Where does all this money come from?

But my business was not there. I had a pleasant invitation to get out of the world for a little while, and so I went over the mountains and found myself in Clay county and down among a people who are happy in their homes. A people who are happy in their homes. A people who are all farmers and have simple habits and limited desires. A people who indulge in no folly and hanker after no big thing. The communities of Lineville and Ashland are as well to do as can be found in any farming country. There are no delapidated homesteads to be seen. No rotten who indulge in no folly and hanker after no big thing. The communities of Lineville and Ashland are as well to do as can be found in any farming country. There are no delapidated homesteads to be seen. No rotten fences or perished out stock. They raise their own corn and meat. They sell more than they buy, and have accumulated enough to build academies and churches of good style and capacity. The schools are prospering and nothing seems lacking to their happiness save a railroad. They average about thirty miles from a railroad market, and have to cross mountains that are a trial and a trouble, and I was told that it cost those people about fifty thousand bales of cotton, and it costs two dollars and a half a bale to get it to a railroad. Well, they have fine land, and they have iron and sin and copper and gold, but they want a railroad. I don't think that a railroad will increase their happiness, but it looks like their time has come for a railroad. There are grown-up children over there who never saw a circus, nor a monkey show, nor the negro minstrels, nor slight of hand. The book agents get over there, and just harvest. Now shall we give those good, kind hearted, hospitable, Christian people a chance to see some of these things, or not. That county has sent out lots of good men, and great men, from Senhtor Morgan down. They are all for Morgan over there. Well, it is strange that a mountain range should make such a difference in people. All for protection on one side and all against it on the other. I'm afraid that our people are not going to harmonize on this great question. Politics is a hard road to travel. It is a science and has to be studied just like mathematics or any other science. It a man succeeds he is a success whether he is right or wrong. I remember that a long time ago Alfred Holt ran against Charley Davis for the legislature in Walton county. Holt was a whig and Davis was a democrat, and they were both awful ugly, and favored each other so much you couldn't hardly tell them apart except by th a proud, stuck up fellow and wore a ruffied shirt and a breast-pin.

Holt said he didn't reckon that was so, and that Holt wouldent get any votes but from poor folks who dident own a foot of land—and said he: "I don't want them sort. I don't want any poor man to vote for me, I don't want to be elected. I don't want any man to vote for me who ain't worth a thousand dollars and owns the land he lives on. Do you tell your nabors that I ain't hunting for poor men's votes. I don't want 'em." And he left him and went back home. Well the fellow thought it was Davis, and he was mighty mad, for he was a poor man himself, and so he spread the news and it got all over the county, and when Davis denied it the fellow made an affidavit and swore to it. and described the man and the. horse, and as the election came off before Davis could straighten it out he got badly beaten. But it got out before the next election and Davis got in and then he got to be judge of the circuit and got uglier and uglier as long as he lived. But he was a good man and a good lawyer and made a good judge. There are tricks in all trades but more tricks in politics than any other. We are going to have fun in our district this year, for the boys are hungry for office and there are not enough to go round and they say that rotation is a sound democratic doctrine and I reckon it is. I thought we were badly hurt when Nat Hammond was beaten for congress, but I believe that Judge Stewart is making a first-nate member. I thought it was an outrage when Judge Branham was beaten, but Judge Mattox is making a splendid judge and so it is all right and no loss on our side.

HE PROMISED THEM A PUP.

HE PROMISED THEM A PUP.

A New York law-yer, who had grown wealthy, as most law-yers do, bought him-self a place in the country and tried sci-country forming, raishim about $2 apiece, and corn each ear of which cost as many e were grains of corn which cost as many pennies to grow as there were grains of corn upon it. He was very fond of inviting his former city friends out to his farm, and took especial delight in showing them a fine pair of English setter dogs that he owned, the female being busily engaged in rearing a litter of nine little ones. If a friend admired these dogs, the following conversation was sure to follow: Mr. —. And so you think Nettie and Ned a fine pair of dogs?

Visitor—The finest I ever saw—magnificent! Mr. —. Glad you like them. How would you like to have one of the pups?

Visitor—Only too delighted, etc.

Mr. —. I'll just make a memorandum of that and send you one when they are over nursing. They are worth $50 apiece, and it is only to an old friend, etc.

As a consequence the friend goes away happy.

As a consequence the friend goes away happy.

One day Mr. —'s wife, just after such a conversation which she had overheard, called him into the house and said:

"John, how many puppies are there?"

"Why, nine, of course."

"Do you have any idea how many people you have promised puppies to in the past two weeks?"

"Well, no: not exactly."

"Well, I do. Just twenty-eight. Now how can you give away twenty-eight when you have only nine yourself?"

can you give away twenty-eight when you have only nine yourself?"

"Oh, bother," he replied. "I don't mean to give away any of the pups, but a friend who admires them would think me a mighty mean man if I didn't even promise them a pup."

And so it is in many things in life. Persons and business firms go on making all sorts of promises that they never can keep and never intended to keep. Promises are cheap, and they sell lots of goods and get lots of favors. Proprietors of patent medicines are particularly prone to scatter all manner of promises broadcast, not knowing and not caring whether they can keep them.

Not so, however, with the Scotch Oats Essence company and its great remedy keeps every promise made for it, and, like a good friend, improves upon acquaintance. They do not claim the earth. They do not say they can

STORIES OF THE WAR.

Plunkett on the Dress of the Two Armies.

What the Soldiers Eat and How They Cooked it—The Fight at Malvern Hill and the Louisianians, Etc., "You hear er heap said erbout the 'gray and the blue," " said Plunkett, as he proceeded .to fill his pipe with tobacco that Brown had chipped from a plug.

"Thar was er heap o' difference between the looks o' Johnston's army and Lee's. If thar was any gray erbout Lee's army, I never seed it, and er man that didn't have er blue yankee overeoat and er yankee canteen, and all these sort o' things, was looked upon as a fresh fellow home and as more'n apt to be er con script."

"Johnston's army warn't that way. They didn't have much clothes, but what they did have was confederate, out and out, and I've have was confederate, out and out, and I've seeder two hundred pound fellow with er coat and jacket on that looked like they mout er been made for er fellow weighing erbout eighty pounds, and er little old gray cap that didn't look like it was mere'n big enough for er doll-baby stuck onto er fellow that had er head as big as er peck measure. It kinder head as big as er peck measure. It kinder looked like they took pains to give little fellows big clothes and big fellows short clothes."

"You couldn't tell Lee's army from the yankees, to see 'em marching erlong; but they wore er dadburned sight better clothes than ever Johnston's army got er hold of—every old soldier knows this—and I b'l'eve Lee's army was eating flour bread er many er time when the other armies were knawing on old corn dadgers."

soldier knows this—and I b'l'eve Lee's army was eating flour bread er many er time when the other armies were knawing on old corn dodgers."

"They didn't none o' 'em have anything to brag on," suggested Brown.

"No," resumed Plunkett, "they didn't none o' 'em have much to eat, and what they did have warn't fixed up much. Soldiers war mighty strange erbout their eating—or their cooking, I mout say. Whenever er new kind o' dish started up the whole army would catch on to it mighty quick, and they'd run it plum in the ground before they'd turn it reloose."

"The most commonest way for er soldier to cook, though, was to put his beef in er camp kettle and set it by the fire and let it simmer erway there all night, and next morning it would be cooked all to pieces and browned with gravy at the bottom that was good eimough for er king to eat. But they'd have changes sometimes, and it's just as I've told you, whenever one fellow started any new way they'd all get at it, and they'd git plum disgusted 'fore they'd stop."

"I knowed er fellow," chimed in Brown, "that was sich er good cook that he liked to have starved himself to death, lettin' fellows taste his vittels. But he soon got outen that. He was one o' these here polite kind o' fellows that would invite you to eat with him if you happened up at his meals, and it was right into er fellow's rations, till pretty soon it got so that jist before he'd ax you to have some he'd turn erround, so as you'd be sure to see him, and spit in his eating three or four times, and er fellow had to be mighty hungry to eat any o' it after that. He'd tell 'em that it was jist er habit he'd got into, and there was er kind o' softening of cold bread and putting melasses into it and then baking er crust on to it; and there was er kind o' weed that growed wild in Virginia that they gathered and biled for vegetables.—I forget the name o' it now, but it was erbout as good as poke saidd.

"The yankees had er plenty o' everything, though. They had canned toff to that, and it was hard times, I fellow couldn't enjoy nothin' what he got. That Chickahominy country was er mighty bad place, and the weather was hot and the fields and woods got dusty from so much trampin' on 'em; but when it did rain thar was mud to pay

'em; but when it did rain thar was mud to pay for it. If I live or thousand years I'll never forget the last day o' the seven days' fight erround Richmond. The last fight was at night, or late in the afternoon and night. It was Malvern Hill, and the fight went on till erbout ten at hight, and the rain was falling all the time. That was er bad place, and you never seed the lightning come noways nigh lighting up the clouds like the yankee cannons that were on top o' that hill, and time after time, and regiment after regiment of our boys tried to get to the top o' the hill and stop 'em; but they couldn't, and thar was many er good soldier that gave up his life that night and died in darkness, with the rain falling down in his face, that there has never been er word said erbout in books, and never will be.

his face, that there has never been er word said erbout in books, and never will be.

"What was called the Louisiana Tigers, went closer to the guns on Malvern hill than any others, and they come mighty nigh being all killed there. Major Wheat, the officer what lead 'em went nearer to the guns than any other man, and was shot down, and as he fell. he hollered out to 'em 'Don't let em get me, born't addition the born't addition that the product of the control of the c boys!' and then there was a rush made to se boys: 'and then there was a rush made to secure the body and there was a hand to hand fight, till two men caught the dead officer by the legs and run down the hill with him. The next battle finished 'em up and they were disbanded, only erbout twelve or thirteen of them being left, and I have never hered of them being left, and I have never hered of them since.

"But thar hain't no use in my talking erbout things erway off yander in Virginia, when I can look right out the window here and see the ground where there was jist as hard fighting done as there was anywhere. I was over in the field there today, and as the plow would go erlong and turn up the dirt I could find an old piece of Sherman's shells every now and then. It looks like we never will get all the balls outen the ground, for every time you plow it and jist wait till er shower of rain comes and sorter settle it down, the dirt will wash offen the balls and leave 'em where you can see 'em. This is the way its been ever since the war, and it looks to me like there has been more balls and pieces of shell picked up offen more balls and pieces of shell picked up offen that ground than it would take to run er good sized war, and they didn't fight there but one day either.

stred war, and they didn't fight there but need ay either.

"I need to save little things that I'd find, but I've give 'em all erway to strangers that would tell me they wanted mementos, but I've got a little book there on the table that I've kept and I'm always going to keep till somebody claims it what has er right to it."

The old man stepped talking as Brown reached over to a little table in the corner and drew forth a little soiled testament. There was nothing that could be seen to identify the owner, owing to its soiled condition. There was a note sheet of paper which had been pasted to the inside back of the book, and there were three or four verses and a name on it but here is all that can be read:

In th's little book there's a promise that's pre-

In this little book there's a promise that's pro-And but for that promise my poor heart would break;
Leive it to you and I know you will keep it.
And read it and heed it, for dear mother's sake.

"I got that little book over on the yankee line the day after the fight, and I'm pretty certain that it belonged to er young Indiana fellow what was killed and buried over there. It was muddy and wet when I got it, and I brought it home and dried it, and I'm going to treen it."

The old man ceased to talk for a moment, but suddenly raising his bowed head, he remarked:
"Just the other day the robbins were hopping "Just the other day the robbins were hopping erround on the limbs of them trees out there, down in the fields the blue birds were looking at the hollow stumps for er place to build their nests, the hickory buds were beginning to swell and the peaches were blooming in the orchard, the dogwood blossoms were fixing to open and the hone-suckles smelt sweet on the branches, but there come a cold wind from the north that brought with it snow and chilled the sap and withered the buds and the birds have gone away. Whatever comes from the north brings trouble.

STORIES OF THE WAR. Plunkett on the Dress of the Two Armies.

What the Soldiers Eat and How They Cooked it—The Fight at Malvern Hill and the Louislaniaus, Etc.,

"You hear er heap said erbout the 'gray and the blue," said Plunkett, as he proceeded to fill his pipe with tobacco that Brown had chipped from a plug.

"That was er heap o' difference between the looks o' Johnston's army and Lee's. If that was any gray erbout Lee's army, I never seed it, and er man that didn't have er blue yankee overcoat and er yankee canteen, and all these sort o' things, was looked upon as a fresh fellow from home and as more'n apt to be er congeript."

"Johnston's army warn't that way. They didn't have much clothes, but what they did have was confederate, out and out, and I've seed er two hundred pound fellow with er coat and jacket on that looked like they mout er been made for er fellow weighing erbout eighty pounds, and er little old gray cap that didn't look like it was more'n big enough for a dall haby stock onto er fellow that had er er doll-baby stuck onto er fellow that had er head as big as er peck measure. It kinder looked like they took pains to give little fellows big clothes and big fellows short clothes."

big clothes and old fellows short clothes."
"You couldn't tell Lee's army from the yaukees, to see 'em marching erlong; but they wore er dadburned sight better clothes than eyer Johnston's army got er hold of—every old soldier knows this—and I b'l'eve Lee's army was eating flour bread er many er time when the other armies were knawing on old corn dodgers."

soldier knows this—and I b'l'eve Lee's army was eating flour bread er many er time when the other armies were knawing on old corn dodgers."

"They didn't none o' 'em have anything to brag on." suggested Brown.

"No," resumed Plunkett, "they didn't none o' 'em have much to eat, and what they did have warn't fixed up much. Soldiers war mighty strange erbout their eating—or their cooking, I mout say. Whenever er new kind o' dish started up the whole army would catch on to it mighty quick, and they'd run it plum in the ground before they'd turn it erloose."

"The most commonest way for er soldier to cook, though, was to put his beef in er camp kettle and set it by the fire and let it simmer erway there all night, and next morning it would be cooked all to pieces and browned with gravy at the bottom that was good ernough for er king to eat. But they'd have changes sometimes, and it's just as I've told you, whenever one fellow started any new way they'd all get at it, and they'd git plum disgusted 'fore they'd stop."

"I knowed er fellow," chimed in Brown, "that was sich er good cook that he liked to have starved himself to death, lettin' fellows taste his vittels. But he soon got outen that. He was one o' these here polite kind o' fellows that would invite you to eat with him if you happened up at his meals, and it was right into er fellow's land to git er meal offen another fellow's rations, till pretty soon it got so that jist before he'd ax you to have some he'd turn erround, so as yon'd be sure to see him, and spit in his eating three or four times, and er fellow had to be mighty hungry to eat any o' it after that. He'd tell 'em that it was jist er habit he'd got into, and there was er lots o' 'em that took it up."

"That's so," resumed Plunkett, "whatever offe got to doin', there were others-that would follow. I nover will forget the dish what they called 'bread pudding.' It was er kind o' softening of cold bread and putting molasses into it and then baking er crust on to it; and there was er hout as good as po place, and the weather was hot and the fields and woods got dusty from so much trampin' on 'em; but when it did rain thar was mud to pay for it. If I live er thousand years I'll never forget the last day o' the seven days' fight erround Richmond. The last fight was at night, or late in the afternoon and night. It was Malvern Hill, and the fight went on till erbout ten at night, and the rain was falling all the time. That was er bad place, and you all the time. That was er bad place, and you never seed the lightning come noways nigh lighting up the clouds like the yankee cannons that were on top o' that hill, and time after time, and regiment after regiment of our boys tried to get to the top o' the hill and stop 'em; but they couldn't, and thar was many er good soldier that gave up his life that night and died in darkness, with the rain falling down in his face, that there has never been er word said erbout in books, and never will be.

"What was called the Louisiana Tigers, went closet to the guns on Maivern hill than any others, and they come mighty nigh being all killed there. Major Wheat, the officer what lead 'em went nearer to the guns than any other man, and was shot down, and as he fell he hollered out to 'em 'Don't let em get me, boys!' and then there was a rush made to secure the body and there was a hand to hand fight, till two men caught the dead officer by the legs and run down the hill with him. The next battle finished 'em up and they were disbanded, only erbout twelve or thirteen of them being left, and I have never hered of them since.

banded, only erbout twelve or thirteen of them since.

"But thar hain't no use in my talking erbout things erway off yander in Virginia, when I can look right out the window here and see the ground where there was jist as hard fighting dione as there was anywhere. I was over in the field there today, and as the plow would go erlong and turn up the dirt I could find an old piece of Sherman's shells every now and then. It looks like we never will get all the balls outen the ground, for every time you plow it and jist wait till er shower of rain comes and sorter settle it down, the dirt will wash offen the balls and leave 'em where you can see 'em. This is the way its been ever since the war, and it looks to me like there has been more balls and piaces of shell picked up offen that ground than it would take to run er good sized war, and they didn't fight there but me day either.

"I used to save little things that I'd find, but I've give 'em all erway to strangers that would tell me they wanted mementos, but I've got a little book there on the table that I've kept and I'm always going to keep till some-body claims it what has er right to it."

The old man stopped talking as Brown reached over to a little table in the corner and drew forth a little soiled testament. There was nothing that could be seen to identify the owner, owing to its soiled condition. There was a note sheet of paper which had been pasted to the inside back of the book, and there were three or four verses and a name on it but here is all that can be read:

In this little book there's a promise that's procious.

In this little book there's a promise that's pro-And but for that promise my poor heart would

"I got that little book over on the yankee line the day after the fight, and I'm pretty cer-tain that it belonged to er young Indiana fel-low what was killed and buried over there. It was muddy and wet when I got it, and I brought it home and dried it, and I'm going to keen it."

The old man ceased to talk for a moment, but suddenly raising his bowed head, he rebut suddenly raising his bowed head, he remarked:

"Just the other day the robbins were hopping erround on the limbs of them trees out there, down in the fields the blue birds were looking at the hollow stumps for er place to build their nests, the hickory buds were beginning to swell and the peaches were blooming in the orchard, the dogwood blossoms were fixing to open and the honeysuckles smelt sweet on the branches, but there come a cold wind from the north that brought with it snow and chilled the sap and withered the buds and the birds have gone away. Whatever comes from the north brings trouble.

SARGE

The yankees were coming! It was about daylight when the news reached F—. It had been expected and dreaded for over a week, and most of the stock had been carried to the swamps, and most of the gold and silver was buried; but there was a lot eft undone that morning in June, and great left undone that morning in June, and great was the consternation inthe sleepy little town. But old Pomp? There was a sort of proverb in F—, that old Pomp couldn't be excited, and in support of that idea the younger people told of the time when the earthquake came, and old Pomp was more immovable that the oldred hills around him, while the older people talked of the great "nigger rising," of 1820, and remembered the fact that Pomp was the only slave for miles around who had not gone to the swamps.

It had been a proverb for forty years before the yankees came. It had stood many tests, and stood them well. But somehow or other it was different when the yankees came. I don't suppose old Pomphimsalf could tell why the yankees were more to be dreaded than the earthquake or the nigger rising, but as a [matter of fact old Pomp was excited.

In spite of all that though, it was old Pomp who gathered all the valuables left in the house and buried them; it was Pomp who gave orders about the hogs and the grain and the cattle, while every one else on the place was too frightened to think for themselves. But before the horses could be driven off old man Craft's Hezekiah came by at a gallop on the big gray mare that everybody in F— knew and had known for years.

He didn't stop.

"For God's sake, Miss Em'ly, you better be quick. De yankees is at de bridge!"
And then he was goue.
"Pomp, what can I do?"
"Jes be easy, Miss Em'ly. Dey can't stay always. I'll carry de horses off, and be back in time dey gets here."
"Pomp, call Bull to help you, or you won't have time."

have time."
Old Pomp's face clouded.
"Don' trus' dat nigger, please, Missis."
"Nonsense, Pomp. He's been with us too long for that."
The faithful old darky moved off without another word, and went to the stables. Bull another word, and went to the stables. Bull was waiting.

Pomp glanced at the bridle in Bull's hand, and then at Bull's face.

"Dat's de black pony's bridle, Bull."

"I knows it, Uncle Pomp—"

"I takes de black pony," interrupted Pomp, savagely. And as they were ready to start, Pomp came back through the house, and from over the door he unslung the little black rifle with the silver eagle on the stock.

Pomp kept his word, for as the yankees drove up to the gate from one side, he came up from the other.

"Where 've you been, old man?" said an of-

With the silver eagle on the stock.

Pomp kept his word, for as the yankees drove up to the gate from one side, he came up from the other.

"Where we you been, old man?" said an officer in blue.

"Been to see ef I could see you from de yuther way, Marster," said old Pomp, meekly.

"Take that gun, Hendrix," said the officer to a private who stoed near him. And the trusty old rifle, which had belonged to Marse Henry's grandfather, and had done such good service against the Britishers in two wars, was thrown carelessly into a high wagon that was painted blue and filled with sacks and kegs.

The officer laughed at Pomp's indignant face, and passed through the gate. It wasn't long before the yard was fall of yankees. The house, too, was full, and Pomp stood at the front gate in a dazed, helpless, bewildered fashion and watched the sacrilege.

The bee hives overturned and the honey trailed over the yards and through the house, the smokehouse robbed, the beds ripped open in search of treasure, and the quilts and blankets tossed whole into the big blue wagon, or cut finto saddle blankets.

And for two days it lasted. The people got used to it, and after the wave of resentment passed off it didn't seem quite so diabolical somehow or other. Eyery one had expected the negroes to go, or most of them, But nobody had expected!Henry Lown's negro bull to go. That was a day of surprises though, and while it was occasionally mentioned, there were more important things to talk about until it was remembered that Bulk knew where the horses were hid.

A hundred horses is a big loss even in war times, and people in the midst of their own trouble would stop to wonder if Bull would tell where the horses were hid.

Pomp said he would. "And missis," continued the old darky, "hit's a mighty good thing I hid the little black pony all by myself. They won't fin' her."

"What makes you think Bull will tell though, Pomp?"

"Well, Miss Em'ly I never did trus' dat nigger, an' w'ats more'n that, when dey passed by de hill I was in de woods an'see w'at I'se kep' bright an' tidy for nigh seventy years."

And Pomp was troubled.

It was nearly two weeks after that when the battle was fonght, and the yankees came back. They didn't pass through F——, but so near that the firing could be plainly heard, and that night old Pomp was gone.

Even in those days of treachery nobody suspected that Pomp had joined the yankees. But where was he?

The question was left unsettled that long moonlight night, and just before day the watchers at the big white house on the hill fell asleep.

That morning old Pomp was at his little cabin next to the big house. The troubled look was gone, and old Pomp was himself look was gone, and old Pomp was himself again.

Over the door his "ole missis" found her husband's rifie. It was brighter than ever, as it old Pomp had made a special job of it.

And at the shallow ford across Morning creek, where the yankees had crossed the night before, with the greatstaring eyes turned upward, and a look of mortal terror pictured in the drawn face and parted lips, was found the body of the runaway—Bull.

The blood had cozed and clotted from a ghastly wound in the breast, and had stained the homespun shirt and ground where he fell. You know how people talk. It was never known really how Bull was killed, but two years ago, when old Pomp was laid to rest, I was told the story I have given you. It is only known that Pomp's lips were forever sealed upon that subject, and that when he was buried, as he so often wished, at the feet of his "ole missis," the long black rifie was buried with him.

Prudence! Prudence!

Prudence! Prudence!

Ir medication, as in aught else, prudence should be our guide. Yet thousands east it to the winds. Every new nostrum finds its patrons, the medical empirics of every false school have their gulls. Every change in the gamut of humbug is rung successfully—for a time at least—the notes being furnished by the credulous. In happy contrast to the many advertised impostures of the day stands Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, now in its third decade of popularity, approved and recommended by physicians, indersed by the press of many lands, sought and prized by invalids everywhere. It is an ascertained specific for and preventive of malarial diseases, chronic indigestion, liver complaint and constipation, checks the growth of rheumatism and neuraligia, is a peerless invigorant and useful diuretic, Nervous people benefit by it.

CHEROKEE NEWS NOTES.

From the Canton, Ga. Advance.

A petition is being circulated in Fannin county, asking the ordinary to order an election on the subject of removing the court house from Morganton to some other point. Mineral Bluff and Blue Ridge, are two growing and progressive towns on the railroad, and they doubtless are clamoring for the county site.

A petition is being circulated asking that a postoffice be established at Blackwell's, on the Marietta and North Georgia railroad.

Canton will in all probability have a national bank in less than twelve months. Such a movement is on foot.

We were shown this week a splendid specimen of asbestos taken from the lands of Mrs. Daniel and her sons, near Orange, in this county. The mine has been temporarily leased to a northern company. The land contains other valuable minerals also. Cherokee is rich in minerals, but poor in means to develop them.

Revenue Officers Alexander, Kellogg and Moses tore up a big distillery at Moore's Mills last Tuesday morning and captured three barrels of whisky and three men. Canton and waived trial before Commissioner Carter.

The Advance is forced to print a six-column supplement this week.

The Advance was shown this week some nice specimens of what Mr. Brooke calls silver ore, taken from the lands of the late W. P. Anderson, of Cobb county, located a few miles west of Canton. It assays twenty-two percent silver, and, if it holds up to this, is certainly valuable and will pay handsomely to work.

Senatorial and legislative candidates have been circulating freely and familiarly amongst us this week.

Why an Actress Shed Real Tears.

From the Philadelphia Press.

BUFFALO, February 25.—An affecting incident occurred at the Court street theater this after noon when Sadie Hasson, in singing a song with some tender words about "sweet home," utterly broke down, and, putting her hands to her face, cried as though her heart would break. Her manager came forward and explained that a telegram had been put in her hands just at the moment she was going out to sing telling of her brother's doth. This startled her so that she only got as far as the second verse. In the seene where she places as the second verse. In the seene where she places a little headstone on a grave the tears she shed were

How Not to Get Too Fat.

But here is a secret for women troubled with obesity, which we anticipate will carry some weight, namely, that bodies exposed constantly to the sungain such activity of the blood forces as to prevent "gain such activity of the blood forces as to prevent any excessive forming of adipose matter." It must no', however, be supposed that, on the other hand, plenty of sunlight is conductive to leanness. Not so, for the really halthul condition is neither fat nor lean, but shapely and plump, and the sun's rays quicken the nutrient functions, producing a beau-tiful and east or roundness of form; indeed, the con-stant action of the sun upon a human body is like the effect upon a plant, vitalizing and strengthen-ing to every part.

THE REV. JOHN SMITH.

The little mountain hamlet of Walton had so few inhabitants that it was impossible to support a church with a regular pastor. Occasionally, when a traveling preacher came along, services were held in the school-house, but as Watton was in a sterile district, remote from railroads and telegraphs, it was not often that the people had the pleasure of hearing a good sermon.

When the Rev. John Smith visited the place, one summer, and made it known that he would probably remain several weeks for the benefit of his health, there was general re-

As a matter of course, the new-comer was invited to preach in the little schoolhouse, and his ready consent pleased everybody.

The parson, as they called him, was perhaps fifty years old, but his long, straight locks hanging down over his shoulders were as black as jet. His complexion resembled that of an Indian, and his tall, lithe figure and erect car riage would have attracted attention anywhere His large, black eyes were singularly bright and piercing, and his strongly marked features gave evidence of superior intelligence, courage

Parson Smith had very little to say about himself. He was an evangelist, he said, and had been engaged most of his life in the far

"I have never carried any letters of introduction or recommendation," he said with a said smile to young Henryl Walton. "Why should I? When a man is so unfortunate as to be named John Smith his identity is lost, and he is confounded with a host of other John

Walton laughed, and agreed with him. He was not very favorably impressed with the stranger, but he felt that it was his duty as the son of the founder of the place to treat all visitors kindly and hospitably. So the very first Sunday, Walton made the parson go home to dinner with him.

It was a great day for pretty Mrs. Walton and she was in a flutter of excitement until

"Oh, Henry," she said, as soon as the evangelist was outside of the gate, "what a wonderful preacher he is!" "I don't know," replied her husband doubtfully; "it seemed to me that his voice had a false ring. He talked well, but he was not earnest enough.' "But his face, Henry, and his soulful eyes!"

"His face," said Walton, reflectively, "reminds me of another face. Let me see-oh, ves, it is the exact image of Satan's face. You know we saw it in a panorama last year."

With a slight frown, and a gesture of depre with a signt frown, and a gestate of depre-cation, Mrs. Walton left, the room.
"The poor man can't help his looks," said Walton to himself, "but if I had met him on a lonely road before I found out that he was a preacher, I'd have been tempted to shoot him ust on general principles; for he does look like Satan, and there is no denying it."

Despite his peculiar and forbidding appear nce, the Rev. John Smith managed to ge along very well with the villagers. Some of his sermons excited surprise, but his hearers concluded that he knew more about the gospel than they did, and they were slow to criticis

As the weeks rolled on, Walton became co scious of a great change in his wife. Her whole mind appeared to be concentrated upon religion. She quoted Parson Smith frequently, and it was easy to see that she attached great weight to even his lightest word.

Henry Walton was somewhat puzzled and amused. He was a hearty, manly fellow, and he was so busy with his farm, and a saw mill, and a mine, that he had little time to think about home matters.

"If the parson converts the little woman, it is all right," he thought; "but I should think that his devil's face would counteract all his the parson to call and sit for an hour or so on the piazza with Mrs. Walton during the long summer afternoons. Sometimes Walton found the two together when he came home, but it was his custom, after exchanging a few words, to excuse himself and pass on into the bouse. "I can't talk about church matters," he said to his wife, "and you can. So you will have to entertain the parson."

It would be hard to tell just when it began to dawn upon Henry Walton that something was wrong at home. He felt it in the air. His wife wore a sad look in his presence, and more than once she told him that he belonged to the ungodly and was on the broad road to de-

Walton smarted under this a little. He did not consider himself a saint, but he knew that he was a tolerably good fellow.
"Come, now," he said to his wife one day,

"don't pile it on so heavy. I don't like it."

Mrs. Walton looked up to the ceiling, shook her head sorrowfully, and then walked away. Her husband gritted his teeth.

"I'll take a hand in this business, hereafter," After that he kept his eyes wide open, and it was not long before he saw some very unpleasant things.

He noticed the close intimacy existing between his wife and the parson. It was not exactly lover-like, but it was mysterious. The evangelist had a way of leaning over and talking in a low tone to his pretty convert, and once Walton saw him slip a paper into her

"The little fool!" growled Walton. "She is so innocent that she does not know how such a thing looks. I know that she means no and, looking down, saw a printed tract of a few pages, bearing the title: "A Vindication of Polygamy." "The infernal, impudent scoundrel!" snort-

Then he walked away, and out of the corner his eye he saw his wife return, and with an anxious glance in his direction, pounce down

For the first time since the advent of the parson into the community Walton began to entertain vague fears of—he hardly knew what. He knew that his wife was true to him, and yet he felt that she was being misled in some way, and that some disaster was impending. One afternoon he came home and found his vife absent. He needed a missing key, and in the course of his search he looked into Mrs. Walton's trunk. His hand came in contact with a book, and without thinking, he pulled the volume out.

He replaced it, shut the trunk, and ran out of the house in a dazed condition.

Before he knew it he found himself near the summerhouse.

The sound of voices inside arrested his footsteps, and he paused a moment.

"And I must leave my husband, you say?
Oh, is there no hope for him?"

"None," replied the deep voice of Parson Smith. "It has all been revealed to me, and your duty is plain. I have made arrangements for our departure, and we must go straight to Utal. There you will be one of the happiest of the Saints. Your husband will have to be

could hear his wife crying. It took the wily Mormon some time to exact a positive promise from the poor woman, but at last he succeeded, and when he left the ummerhouse his face wore a look of triumph.
"He looks more like the devil than ever," remarked Walton to himself, as he carefully kept out of sight behind the foliage.

The wretched and indignant husband slipped into the house by a back entrance. He put a seven-shooter in his pocket, and darted out of the door, and was out of sight before his Walton took a short cut through the woods

It was his design to intercept the Mormon elder—for such he now knew him to be before he reached his boarding house. When he reached the place where he expect ed to meet his enemy he took his stand behind a tree and waited patiently.

"I'll let him cross the creek," said Walton,
"and then I'll confront him." He examined his pistol, and satisfied himself

Down the hill walked the Mormon elder with a stately stride. His dark face wore a smile, and his air was that of a conqueror. When he came to the creek he paused. A single foot-log served as a bridge, and a mar had to have his wits about him when he walked it. The stream was a furious torrent, whirling and eddying among jagged rocks, and rushing

Smith waited only a moment. He stepped on the log and walked onward until he was half way over. Then he looked up and saw Henry with a slight twinge of remorse as he glanced at his pistol, "but I suppose it had to be. I hardly know what to do, but I'll keep my lips closed. The little woman shall never know. She was the victim of a spell. Perhaps in a little while t will pass off.'

For days and weeks Mrs. Walton looked troubled and thoughtful, but as time passed on without a word from Elder Smith, she began to grow indignant. People in the village said that the elder had absconded, leaving his board bill unpaid, and some said they had always doubted him.

One day Walton's wife suddenly burst into tears and confessed her folly to her husband. "I think I must have been mad," she said, "or under the man's fascination, for now that he is absent I hate him and his abominable loctrines.'

Walton laughed heartily. "You take it too seriously," he said. "You are soo sensible a woman to be hoodwinked that way. You would have sent the fellow about business, even if he had not skipped out." Mrs. Walton was grateful for these words. The name of the Mormon elder was never mentioned again, and if she was not a happy and a loyal wife during the remainder of her life, nobody ever found it out.

A REVOLUTIONARY RELIC.

Discovery of Hidden Treasure That Has Been Sought for Years.

BALTIMORE, Md., February 27.—Several thousand dollars in old gold coin in earthen pots were exhumed by Lorenzo Mears, on his farm in Accomac county, Va., yesterday. A tradition in the neighborhood says a large amount of money was concealed on the farm during the American revolution by its tory proprietor, who, having gone to England during the war, died there without fixing the spot where he had buried the money. Not many years ago some of the descendants of the old tory proprietor came over here and spent spot where he had buried the money. Not many years ago some of the descendants of the old tory proprietor came over here and spent several hundred dollars in making excavations in a fruitless search for the money. All the ground around the old house was thrown up and deep trenches were dug around the yard, signs of which still remain. It is said that these Englishmen brought over with them an old negro who had been a servant of the revolutionary proprietor, and who professed to know where his master had buried the money. The Englishmen finally gave up the search and went back to England.

Nothing more was heard of the treasure until Mears accidently struck upon it while planting some fence post around the yard. Mears tried to keep the matter a secret, but a little boy who lives with him went to the neighboring village of Pungoteague and let the secret out. He informed some persons there that his "Uncle Renzie" now had piles of money, having recently dug up an iron pot full of gold and silver which two stout men could hardly carry. Mears will not talk about his find, but today showed several gold coins to his neighbors. These coins are old English money, some of them being stamped with the image of Charles II., others with that of George III.

The place where the treasure was found was one of the oldest on the eastern shore of Virginia. Two hundred and fifty years ago it was the seat of the queen of Nandua, an Indian beauty, who ruled over the savage tribes. That inhabited that region. Near by is the burial ground of the Nandua Indians. The creek has cut away the earth till many of the skeletons are exposed to view, and as the bank caves in from time to time the bones fall down into the water and drift with the ebbing tide out into the bay. Some of the skeletons are of giant size, and many of them are buried in coffins that were hewn out of solid logs. These whitening skeletons, as they protrude from the side of the cliff, present a ghastly spectacle.

ROUGH ON THE FAMILY.

A Servant Girl Attempts to Extern Her Employers.

Her Employers.

San Antonio, Tex., March I.—[Special.]—City Engineer S. P. Maury and his family have miraculously escaped from recent systematic efforts on the part of a servant to poison them. Mr. Maury lives about a mile and a half from the city, on the rock quarry road, and his family, including himself, wife and three little children, have for the past week been ailing with a form of illness which baffled their family physician. Mr. Maury himself was confined to his bed with a severe headache, and no remedy administered seemed to have the desired effect. Nothing unusual was suspected until yesterday, when the servant girl brought him a cup of tea she had prepared for him. Maury lifted the beverage to his lips, and detecting a foreign and most unusual taste to it, gave it to his wife and asked her to see what it contained. Mrs. Maury immediately repaired to the kitchen and openly charged the girl with putting something in the tea, which she confessed was true, adding that she had done it for the purpose of poisoning them.

The poison used was the contents of a bottle of vapor cressaliue, a deadly decoction used for exterminating vermin. Upon being questioned as to her motive, the girl replied that she didn't know. She admitted that she had been well treated, and had used the poison because an old woman named Eliza Warren had given didn't know. She admitted that she had been well treated, and had used the poison because an old woman named Eliza Warren had given her directions and had told her to do it.

Mr. Manry immediately had the girl arrested. She is colored, and has been employed in Mr. Maurey's family as a housemaid for nearly a year. Her name is Lizzie Bilse. On Monday she gave Mr. Maury a slice of toast with a layer of something on it, which immediately caused his stomach to revolt and vomit up, what he had eaten. It was probably "Rough on Rats," and several times the tea and drinking water had the same effect.

The instigator of the girl's action, so she says, is Eliza Warren, an old woman about sixty-five years old, who was employed with her in the Maury family several months ago. She has several times lately been seen talking to the girl. Since her discharge she has been making affidavits against various persons for chasing her on white horses. CHICAGO, March 3-(Special.)—The semi-revival of speculative trade in grain that came with the opening of March was of short duration. While the temporary bulge continued there was activity, but with the reaction and decline in prices came dullness. About everything on the floor opened this morning at a trifle better prices than Friday's close. The tendency of everything was uniformly and slowly downward, and the opening sales were at the bast figures of the day. Wheat for May started at 80%c, sold at once to 80%c and then in an hour went off to 80%@80%c. There was nothing particularly discouraging in the situation. In fact, it is regarded strong at present prices by a majority of the trade, but still there was apathy and a narrow range of prices. May remained at 80%c during a greater part of the ression, and finally closed at thet force. The beautiful weather of the past week, in comparison with the miserable dampness of the week before, has given life to everything about town, and amusements have been general throughout the week. The greatest social event though was the literary and nussical entertainment at the college hall last Tuesday evening, given by the ladies of the Methodist church, and under the supervision of Mrs. Judge Rudolph and Mrs. Ir Baily. All interested should feel fiathered over their great success. Our dramstile, literary and musical talent assisted in the performance, and the large andience was highly pleased with the entertainment. The music was under the management of Mesdames Perry, Smith, Whetchel, Brown. Jarrett and Misses Callaway and Van Hoose, which is sufficient guarante of the excellent rendition of every piece. The recitations by Misses Worley, Moreno, LaHatte, Powell and Dr. Ryder were well received and applanded. The farce, "A Dentist's Shop," by Messra i'c un, Van Hoose and Ryder, was laughable from beginning to end, and each one rendered well his part.

Mr. Tilney is a superb planist with a cultivated voice that proves him to be a master of music. He has made many friends in Gainesville who will always welcome him in their midst.

There was an impromptu gathering last Wednesday at Dr. Ryder's dental parlors of a number of his friends to listen to the skilled performance upon the piano, and the excellent singing of Mr. Arthur Tilney, of Detroit, He entertained the party well indeed, and every one expressed themselves as perfectly delighted with his superior music, and he has proven himself a golendid musician, as is attested to by our most telented lovers of the art. Those present were: Mesdames Murphry, Camp, Whetchel, Thompson, and Misses Banks, Candler, Daniel, Blackshear, Concer, Daniel, Laliatte, Wright, and Messrs, Shelley, Christopher, Thompson, Dinkins, Richardson, Glover, Brim, Laliatte, Brown, Daniel and Ryder.

The seminary girls are expecting to give an entertainment at an early date for the benefit of the Pledmont Riles. This is quite commendable in our fair college girls, and it shows that if they are not allowed to talk to the boys they will devise means of working for them, and the boys are made happy. Roland Reed's New York Success - Th Brondway Theater - Frank Frayne This Week.

The dramatic reading to be given by Mrs le Miller Oton on Thursday evening, promises one of the mostidelightful entertainments of the on. Mrs. Oton was the special favorite of the Adelaide Neilson and was by her considered passessor of great dramatic talent. Mrs. Oton sea highly praised by all the best New York

The burning of the Union Square theater brought heavy losses to Manager Hill and Messrs. Robson & Crane. It also gave the newspapers the opportunity to tell good stories at the expense of the two comedians. Here is an extract: two comedians. Here is an extract:

"There's a man for emergencies." continued Mr. Robson, pointing to Mr. Crane. "There's presence of mind! Do you know that he didn't lose a minute after hearing of the fire, but, snatching up a fireman's hat, he rushed into the theater, rescued two umbrelias and a walking stick, ran out to the Star theater, caught hold of a trunk belonging to a member of the Lyceum theater company that was already attached to a man's shoulders, and seeing Mr. Proctor coming along, struck him at once for open time in his circuit. There's a man for an emergency!"

The Theater This Week.

The theatrical season is nearing the end, and the attractions are becoming scarce. Only one company will appear this week, Frank I. Frayne, of melodramatic fame, who will present Friday night and saturday at mainee his new drama, "Mardo, the Hunter," and saturday night "Si Slocum."

"Mardo" is a very sensational drama, and it will be presented with all the necessary accessories to make it realistic and interesting. Besides the manly and statuesque s'ar, who by himself is worth a "roinage, the play will introduce the well known ion "Ingersoil," two bears, two hyenas, four dogs and the beautiful trained horse, "Kentucky Boy." Aff that display promises an exciting performance, and the verdict of the press everywhere is that the show deserves the most liberal patronage. The Syracuse Herald thus noticed the play:

"People who attend the grand opera house this week are certain to get their money's worth. Brama, comedy, menagerie and a little circus are thrown in promiseuously, affording abundant opportunities to either laugh, cry or shudder with fear. Frank I. Frayne and a company of good actors, a lion, a lear a hyena, a donkey and a performing dog made things very lively at the initital performances yesterday. The audiences were eno mous, especially last night, when the second tier was literally packed to the ceiling, and at times the "gods" were very boisterous and annoying. The ampliance was dealening. especially last night, when the second tier was literally packed to the ceiling, and at times the "gods" were very loisterous and annoying. The appliance was deafening. "Mardo, the Hunter," is a thrilling play, and is filled with situations calculated to arouse enthusiasm. The excitement begins in the first act with an extremely realistic bowle knife duel, and the burning of a minner's hut in the third act is certainly one of the best fire scenes ever invented. In the last act Mardo enters the cage of a hyena, drives out the animal and lets in the lion, "Ingersoll." Mr. Frayne has many good qualities, and does some good acting. He has admirable support, each character being allotted a good share of the work. Miss DeForrest is a graceful and finished actress, and she won the honors of the audience in the third and fourth acts. A. F. Amann, as the villain, and G. A. Weller, as the czar of Russia, were also good. "Mardo, the Hunter," will be repeated this and tomorrow evenings, and at a matine tomorrow."

The Exedus From New York.

Good actors are getting away from New York as fast as possible, says the Mirror. Elwin York as fast as possible, says the Mirror. Elwin Booth goes traveling to earn a little money. Lester Wallack has gone to Connecticut to live. Old John Gilbert will go back to Boston and be put in the museum. A greater pity than all is that so gooden actor as Osmond Trarle should be allowed to go back to Englard to live. To a reporter Mr. Tearle said: "You see, two years ago when I returned to America, it was because I thought I would like to get back hore and travel. I had always been identified with Wallack's theater, and had had no actual experience of travel in American one night stands. But I got a little and didn't like it. Then I went back to Wallack's, and now, as it seems to me, the slock system is going to die out here—mind you, I may be mistaken—and as I had Saveral good offers to go back and star I determined to return to the other side. Besides that, in traveling here, one may be mistaken—and as I had several good offers to go back and star I determined to return to the other side. Besides that, in traveling here, one must separate from one's family. If I go on the road I may be able to take my wife, but I must leave the children, and so the family circle is broken up. When I came out a couple of years ago, English managers, who had played me, wrote over that I was a fool to leave when the field was open for legitimate work, and I had expended about seven years of labor there. I like the legitimate better, too, so I've entered into a contract for two years with Mr. Beryl, manager of the Theater Royal, Edinburg, and the Princess, Glasgow. I'm now making my preparations. Hawthorne is manufacturing my costumes. I shall introduce a number of American specialties in the advertising department. My wife will, of course, play with me. The repertoire will include "Hamlet," 'Virginius," "Brutus, or the Fall of Tarquin, "'Circlello" and "The Merchant of Venice." Mrs. Tearle will assume the heavy leading roles, as the queen, Portia and Evelina. I shall leave here immediately on the coachision of my engagement at Wallack's, and I open my season at Nottingham, on August 6. Thope me s sin eredy to some here again, but Lean'tsay when."

The end of the world is confidentally pre-dicted for the year 1900, but no man has nerve abound to prophecy when the end of "Erminie" will be. Mr. J. H. Browne, the clever young actor, who was here with "Jim, the Penman," has been compelled to give up his work because of lung trouble.

Fred Warde has entered into a contract with Manager Joseph Brooks for three years. The season will be opened in New York with a grand revival of Miss Loie Fuller, the clever young actress, will probably blossom out as a star next season in a four act comedy called "Rival Belles," by Edward Greey, the famous art collector.

Jack Armory, the clever comedian with Rhea, is much sought after for next season. Jack is one of the most thoroughly funny men on the stage, and his manny Atlanta friends rejoice at his continued success.

Last evening, in Baltimore, at the Holliday street theater. Robert B. Mantell played the part of Othello for the second time, and Mr. John Albaugh, the veteran manager of the house, appeared as lago for the first time in many years.

Miss Alice King Hamilton has joined the Hart comedy company as leading lady. She is a society belie, and related to the heat "upper tendom" funilies in New York. Unlike others, she proposes to study her profession and obtain experience before permitting her many wealthy friends to star her.

One of the physical peculiarities of the cast f "The Corsair," is that it contains the smallest not the stoutest burlesque actresses now on the tage. They are Miss Annie Summerville, high and tafely; Miss Clara Lane, petite to a degree, and diss Rosa Cooke, who, although pretty, is the most abstantial embodiment of humor.

Robert Downing, the handsome young tracedian, is doing a phenomenally large business in New England, despite the Lenton season. In several of the large cities long petitions signed by prominent citizens have been handed Manager Joseph H. Mack, requesting a return of dates. Lowell and Lawrence, Mass., each offered a large certainty for a return.

Last Thursday when Mr. W. J. Scholan arrived in Fall River, where he was advertised to appear that evening, he was met at the depot by a delegation from the W. J. Seanlan dramatic club, which escorted him to his hotel. During the performance Mr. James M. Bow, on behalf of the club, presented the actor with a handsome gold-headed anne suitably inscribed. After the performance Mr. Scanian was given a banquet by the club at their tooms, where he met a number of people prominent

The New Broadway theater is the first playhouse erected in New York since the enforcement of the new building laws. It has a frontage on Broadway of 92 feet. 2 inches, on Forty-first street of 157 feet. 2 inches, and on Soventh avenue of 98 feet 9 inches. The depth through the center of the building is 72 feet of inches. From the stage footights to the rear wall of the auditorium proper it is 8 feet. From the parquet floor to the main ceiling it is 57 feet. The building has a suild but not very pretty front in brownstone and red pressed brick and is five stories high. There are 700 orchestra seats and ten boxes, 434 seats in the first balcony and the second balcomy will seat more than 600. In the Interior the Romanesque style prevails, and the color of the decorations range from a rather dult maroon to an autique pink and old gold. The curtain is a good copy of Arthur Jule Goodman's painting, "The Arrival of the Bride."

Hunnicut Rheumatic Cure Co.:

Dear Sirs—It gives me pleasure to express my high appreciation of "Hunnicutt's Rheumatic Cure," and to inform you of the remarkable cure which I have experienced from its use, I suffered for sixteen years with rheumatism in its most obstinate and most distressing form. I used all the most apand most distressing form. I used all the most ap-proved remedies known to the medical profession and consulted some of the most eminent physicians not only in this country, but in Europe, without obtaining only temporary relief, Some attacks would confine me to my bed and room for six months. During one of these attacks, while pros-trated and desponding, almost without hope of re-covery, Mr. Hunnicutt called to see me, and made known his formula and gave his experience in reknown his formula and gave his experience in regard to the many wonderful cures made by his "Cure." I was pleased with his combination and candid recommendation, and at once began the use of his Cure. In twenty-four hours I was the happiest man in the world, free from pain, and could sleep—next day was able to walk about my house. Language is as inefficient to describe the happy effects of the "Cure" as it is to convey an adequate idea of the intensity of my sufferings before the use of "Hunnicutt's Cure." Sufficient to say that the use of two bottles effected a complete cure of my case after suffering for sixteen years.

Cough in its severest form, and I could fad nothing to releave it until I procured a bottle of Hunnicutt's Cure. There we had Lung Lung. After taking about one-fourth of same the dear little one was cured complete cure was effected, especially in my own case. Southern Sentiment Against Removal-Ob. jections from Captain Stewart—The Old Pile to Be Used as a Museum.

From the Chicago News. When the ever-vigilant American speculator first turned to commercial account the thrill-ing epochs of the war by reproducing them in anoramas loud protests were not wanting.

Reviving dead issues," "Prolonging sectional hatreds," "The degradation of hallowed ories," were some of the pet plarises of who found fault with the scheme. It is eedless to suggest which view of the case triumphed. The sentimentalists were routed, and another generation of Americans has lived the war scenes over again on canvas, while those who invested in the canvas have been nearly buried in an avalanche of dollars.

objections against perpetuating memories of the war have again come to the front, only in a more intensified form, since it was proposed to transfer Libby prison to Chicago as a business enterprise. The arrangements for this transfer have been practically completed. A recent dispatch from Richmond says that an architect, after careful examination, says the building can be taken down and ed to Chicago at a much smaller cost than the first estimate. Mr. W. H. Gray, of Chicago, was with the architect when the latter examined the building last week, and when Richmond people found out that Mr. Gray had the money in his pocket to make the first payment on the property their protests began to accumulate in earnest. The Richmond ate was one of the first to voice southern opinion. Among other things, the State said torially in a late issue:

OPINION OF A SOUTHERN PAPER.

"To set up Libby prison in a northern city "To set up Libby prison in a northern city and to have thousands of people inspect it under the guidance of mercenaries whose daily task will be exaggeration, is to contrive a new means for intensifying whatever remains of hostility to the south. The southern people have hear! many a recital of the sufferings of Point Lookout and Johnson's island, but they want none of the reminders of those prison pens set up in their midst. They have no desire to perpetuate animosity and unforgiveness toward the people of the north.

"If it be not too late—and we trust that it is not—let steps be taken at once to prevent the not—let steps be taken at once to prevent the removal from this city of an object that should have been razed to the ground long ago—a removal that can result in no good, but, on the contrary, is fraught with evil to the coming removal transfer of our company country.

moval that can result in no good, but, on the contrary, is fraught with evil to the coming generations of our common country. No project that could be conceived by the worst enemy of the American people could be more dangerous than the rebuilding of this old and crumbling prison as a temple of south hate."

In another issue the same paper said:
"The objection to the removal of Libby prison may be said to come from a sentimental idea. To set the building up in Chicago, to put wax-figure sentinels in gray uniform about its doors, to placard here and there a cell to tell a story of brutality, will be still further in keeping with the scheme, for there is no sentiment about this. It is confessed that it is for cool cash. There were daring raiders on the northern side whose fervid imagination schemed the capture of Libby prison, the release of the prisoners, and the demolition of the structure. But they could not take it down. It still stands. Yet now we are to have a demonstration of the power of a few thousand dollars, greater, than the valor that through sentimental promptings resisted this removal, and we, of Richmond, of the south, are asked to low down, grin acquiescence, and discarding sentiment, hail the enterprise that will make a part of the furniture of the lost cause a drawing card for a show, while rabbles, for only ten cents, can see the exhibition and go away with a full appreciation of how lost indeed is that cause when its very public buildings are carted off a thousand miles and set up for sport or jeers."

UNION MEN AGAINST THE PROJECT.

The protests are not all, however, from sympathizers with the lost cause. Here and

UNION MEN AGAINST THE PROJECT.

The protests are not all, however, from sympathizers with the lost cause. Here and there a union officer, whose memories of Libby are principally those of personal suffering, has joined in the protest. The ground taken is that Libby prison is one of the saddest memories of the entire war. To turn into a museum for the delectation of the vulgar crowd a building sacred by reason of suffering and martyrdom for the holiest of causes would be wrong, is the plea of the northern officer who doesn't want to see Libby prison moved. Here is what Captain James Stewart, of Pittsburg, the last union officer to evacuate Libby, says in a recent interview:

"To take it now and turn it into a money-making show would be an insult to the south and a degradation to the north. I saved the old building once from being destroyed by fire, but if it was only for a museum that I saved it I am never going to claim any honor or credit again for the act.
"There was a lot, of suffering in that old again for the act.

"There was a lot of suffering in that old building. Thousands of soldiers in this broad country were made old men before their time, building. Thousands of soldiers in this broad country were made old men before their time, and almost as many more gave up life within those four walls. The memories of that time and of those horrors are dead, even though they never can pass from our minds, and to take that prison up to Chicago and turn it into a war museum would surely create bad feeling and open up old wounds. The citizens of the south are against it, and surely the north should not encourage it?"

In a letter to the mayor of Richmond, Captain Stewart also says: "Few, I will venture to say none, of those who are concerned in the scheme, had anything to with old Libby during the time it was used as a prison. I am well acquainted with a large number of men who were confined within its walls, and I do not know one who approves of its removal. It would be no longer 'Libby prison.' There would be no James river, no Belle isle, no other landmark. Neither the remains of 'Pemberton' nor 'Castle Thunder' would form the associations that were wont to greet our eyes when inmates of far-famed 'Libby.' The prison without its associate surroundings would not be Libby to the 'boys in blue' who were from time to time confined within its walls. It might serve to collect dimes and dollars as a ghastly circus exhibition to fill the pockets of sharp, unprincipled speculators—men that have conceived the selfish and despicable idea of violating the sanctity of the soldier's sufferings and to many the very spot of their death."

The eldest ex-prisoner of war in Chicago is

A UNION VETERAN'S OPINION.

The oldest ex-prisoner of war in Chicago is Mr. Lee Mayer of L. Simon & Co., Monroe street. Mr. Mayer has been for the last four years vice-president of the Veteran Union league. He is one of the very few union officers now residing in Chicago who were imprisoned in Libby, and his incarceration in that prison was one of the longest—namely, eleven months. He spent twenty months, all told, in various prisons. He belonged to the Twelfth Pennsylvania cavalry, was wounded and captured at the battle of Winchester, and during his stay at Libby escaped twice, but was recaptured both times, once by bloodhounds. He was one of the famous 109 who made the tunnel escape, but belonged to the unlucky fifty-five who were recaptured. He finally escaped at Columbia, S. C., just prior to Sherman's capture of the city.

Said Mr. Mayer vesterday to a Daily News A UNION VETERAN'S OPINION.

unlucky fifty-five who were recaptured. He finally escaped at Columbia, S. C., just prior to Sherman's capture of the city.

Said Mr. Mayer yesterday to a Daily News reporter: "I am opposed to any such scheme as bringing Libby prison to Chicago, and I should suppose any ex-prisoner of war would be. This matter was talked over among the veterans last Sunday, and the sentiment seemed to be unanimous that it was an unwise step. No ex-prisoner of war would care to have the horrors of twenty-five years ago revived, as would be the case in this instance. Although they might not have been in Libby, still an ex-prisoner who has suffered at Andersonville or Belle Isle would have his own imprisonment vividly brought to rememberance. Speaking as one who endured imprisonment in Libby, I never care to go into the deals of those horrible times. The actual st uvation, suffering and filth endured are not pleasure to recall, but they can hardly be exage rae! What, then, is the use of bringing the old building here to serve as a perpetual reminder of these things?"

The shade of pain in the speaker's eyes softened, and he continued, with a smile:

"As a commercial enterprise, I should expect it to be a failure. After being taken to ploces and re-erected in Chicago it will be practically a new building. There will have to be new mortar used, and I suppose it will receive a fresh coat of paint. This will not be the Libby prison of history. If they turn it into a museum and charge an admission fee there will have to be something inside beside the bare walls. Why not get some ex-soldiers who have passed through Andersonville, or other prisons, some without arms or legs, and show then as caros? But, seriously, the effect of making a show of Libby prison and pointing out to visitors the particular rooms, etc., where our officers endured their greatest hardships, will be injurious, and not calculated to make the two participants in the great strife mutually forgive and forget."

The county judge, a cold, indifferent man, sent several men to bury the body. When the men entered the desolate room, a little girl, in touching supplication, was kneeling on the straw, the death-bed of her mother. In respect for the little one's grief, they moved softly around the room, and eased the rude coffin to

"No, she ain't. I was bad and cried, and wouldn't hush when she told me to, and now she's gone to sleep and won't wake up. Please wake, mamma, and I'll always be good. If you'll only git up I won't cry for anything to eat. I ain't hungry now; please get up."

"Little girl, we must take your mother away. Move aside, please, and let us lift her up."

"that she can't understand. Poor little thing. I wish I had not undertaken this work. Let us lift your mother, little girl. Move the coffin near her, Bill."
"Move the what?" she said quickly. How eagerly her ears caught the sound. The word "death" was unknown to her, the pallid face and the immovable eye-lids did not strike her with the true meaning, but the word "coffin"—that word of all others the most suggestive, the fullest of a thought appalling—stirred her sense of something horrible.

"She is dead." and burying her face in the straw, she wildly sobbed and moaned in that intensity of grief which is nowhere stronger, and never so genwine as in childhood.

"Bill," said one of the men, "step over and tell the old judge to come here," and, unable longer to endure the sight of the dead face, he covered it with an old apron. Presently the adge came. WITH A HOLE IN HIS HEAD.

Patrolmen Find a Man on the Sidewalk Just before two o'clock Patrolman Christophine found a man lying upon the sidewalk near the corner of Forsyth and Walton streets. The man was covered with blood, and was apparently dead. A careful examination, however, showed that he was still alive. The patrol wagon was called out, and the man was taken to the city prison. An ugly and dangerous looking wound was found in the back of his head. No one recognized the man Dr. Van Goidtsnoven, the prison physician, was sent for, and pronounced the man's condition serious. He is a young white man, attired neatly.

A VAGABOND.

Pen Picture of a Type Not Confined to New England. W. Higginson in Harper's Magazine

He [Henry Tufts, the subject of this sketch] began his career in the usual manner of coun-try boys who take to bad courses, by robbing orchards and henroosts. At fourteen he try boys who take to bad courses, by robbing orchards and henroosts. At fourteen he planned with two companions to steal bread, cheese and cucumbers, and hide them in the woods. The others provided the bread and cheese, and he the cucumbers, stripping a whole patch. Being dissatisfied with the provisions the others had made, he resolved to frighten them out of their share, so he raised an alarm so that they all took fright, after which he came back and carried off all the supplies. Not content with this, he informed his companions that the farmer they had robbed had captured him, and had exacted of him three days' labor, so that each of the other boys gave him a day's work on his father's farm as their share of the imaginary penalty. This early incident gives the key to his whole life, which was spent in first defrauding others and then his accomplices. When he was twenty-one he began the more public practice of his profession by stealing his father's horse and selling it for thirty dollars.

In the active practice of his profession he traveled habitually between Canada and Virginia, having a line of confederates, like a trapper's line of traps, through the whole route. His system of living reached a singular perfection. When he needed food he took it, where ever he found it, not confining himself to the necessaries of the table, but adding the luxuries, as when he stole a beehive and carried it some distance. on which occasion he must have discounted, so to speak, the stings luxuries, as when he stole a beenive and carried it some distance, on which occasion he must have discounted, so to speak, the stings of remorse. When he needed a pair of boots, he looked out for a shoemaker's shop, and contrived to be near it at nightfall. In respect to linen, for him the land seemed as covered with labeled linears new with telegraphic wires and linen, for him the land seemed as covered with clothesines as now with telegraphic wires, and once when he needed small clothes he spied through the window of a churh a suitable pulpit cushion, stole it, sold the feathers and made a pair of breeches of the green plush.

It is needless to say that in him horsestealing—which has been in all ages, as Scott says of treason, "the crime of a gentleman"—rose to the dignity of a fine art. Some fifty separate thefts of this kind are recorded in his book.

ate thefts of this kind are recorded in his book. He asserts that he could go into a stable at night and select a particular horse by his way of eating his hay. He could so disguise a horse by paint that his former owner, riding by his side, did not know him. He would stcal a side, did not know him. He would steal a horse, ride him twenty miles, and exchange him for another, and make two more exchanges before reaching one of his homes again—for he had almost as many homes as horses. In one case he took a neighbor's horse, sold it for fifty-one dollars, and on being detected, guided the neighbor to the place where it was sold, hoping to find it and steal it back again. Not finding it, they each stole another horse, were caught and were punished with thirty-five lashes each from a cat-o-nine-tails. In another case a man boasted that his horse had a special guard every night, and could not be stolen. Tufts accepted the challenge, gave the guards rum and opium, and rode the horse away.

It was while he was a deserter from the army, in the year 1780, that an event occurred which throws much light from below, as I may say, on the whole history of the continental currency. He had rambled from West Point to Vermont, when the whim took him, he says, to visit "in rotation"—a good name for his mode of life—the town of Charlemont, in order to give significations of Sally. Judd whom he had mode of life—the town of Charlemont, in or-der to gain sight of Sally Judd, whom he had married when he had another wife living. He there put up at Spencer's tavern. A stranger rode to the door, a genteel, well-looking man, who dismounted to refresh himself, but dewho dismounted to refresh misself, but de-clined to stay longer. On being pressed by Tufts, who liked his company, he said that his money was almost out, and he must be getting home. Tufts, who describes himself as being always generous when flush of money, offered to pay his bill. So he staid all night, and they shared the stranger made a confession. His shared the same room. In the darkness of the night the stranger made a confession. His name was Whiting, "and he had long been an agent for the British, who had engaged him for an emissary to explore the country and circulate counterfeit money." "As congress had issued a paper medium to raise armies and pay off their troops, it invited their adversaries to discredit the currency as much as possible. And as such large quantities of paper had been issued already, the speedlest way to effect the entire dissolution of the system was to inundate the country with counterfeit bills." It accordingly proved that this genteel stranger, who had not enough good money to pay his landlord had fifty thousand dollars of counterfeit continental money in his pocket, and one thousand of this he gladly transferred to Tufts in exchange for "a little silver to discharge bills in particular places." Mr. Whiting rode away after breakfast, having had a distinction, which belonged to few men, of teaching to which belonged to few men, of teaching to Henry Tufts a wholly new line of roguery. It is of historical interest to know how this fresh branch of industry succeeded. To all appearance, admirably. He says: "On the same day of my receiving the spurious bills, curiosity prompted me to make experiment of their currency. On trial I found not the slightest difficulty in passing them. Indeed, my bills were such an exact imitation of the genuine ones that a man must have had more penetration than ordinry to have discerned the slightest difference." Accordingly, as the currency daily depreciated, he made haste to invest his hoard in something permanent—"bought a horse, a new outfit of clothes, and materials for a complete suit of female apparel," which last he sent as a present to the yet unseen Sally Judd, intending it as a kind of atonement for the damage her character had suffered through his acquaintance. It is interesting to for the damage her character had suffered through his acquaintance. It is interesting to know that it brought Sally to an immediate interview, though a stormy one, which closed with a further atonement in the shape of fifty counterfeit dollars, which she accepted, though without yielding her wrath. He then departed, and says: "I had not traveled many miles before I had the address to traffic away my horse for money and goods, which articles I transported, like an honest man, to my family."

Even Henry Tufts, it seems, had his standard of what constituted an honest man.

SOUTHERN TEMPERANCE.

Most of the Heavy Drinking is Done in the Washington Letter:

Passing over to the desk of Senator Butler I asked him about temperance in South Carolina. He asked me to sit down, swung around in his chair, and said: "Til interview you first. In what portion of the country do you suppose people drink the most incree?" e most liquor?"
"Well," I answered, "I suppose the south is the "Well," I answered, "I suppose the south is the stronghold of the convivial kings-Racchus and Gambrinus. It isgenerally understood that the typical southerner can stow away more whisky than any other man between the occans."

"Yes." said Seuator Butler, "it is, And it is a wild mistake. The heavy drinking is done at the north. The north has a great many more saloons according to the population, and sells much more liquor to the salon."

"Where do you get such astounding figures as that, senator?"

"From the census—and from personal observa tion, too. Now take my own county of Edgefield—t contains 45,00 people, but I know every habitual drunkard in the county."
"I don't exactly see how that proves anything as to their number," I said, with a puzzled thought upon my otherwise placid countenance.

He laughed and explained that his associations were not altogether confined to that class of people, "but they were so few," he continued, "that they are conspicuous, and their weakness is known to everybody. "According to the census of 1870, there were 1,200 liquor sa'oons in South Carolina, as I remember it, 17,000 in Pennsylvan a, and 24,00 in New York. Now call the populations, in round numbers, New York, 4,500,000; Pennsylvania, 3 500,600; South Carolina, 900,000. In South Carolina there was one sa-locn to 750 people, in New York one saloon to 190 people, and in the Quaker state one saloon to 206 people. How is that showing people. How is that showing?"

"Calculated to surprise people," I said.
"I have no doubt," Senator Butler resumed, "that even by the last census, New_York and Pennsylva nia, and all New England, drank three times as ch liquor as the Gulf states according to popula tion. In accordance, probably with the law of so-cial dynamics, that people north of a certain isoth-ermal line are much more addicted to drink than those south of it."

"What is your method of dealing with the evil?" I "We believe in and practice local option. Th state relegates it to the countses and towns. Let every community determine its own policy.

ORIGIN OF ARTESIAN WELLS. They Can be Traced Back to the Time of the

From the Popular Science Monthly f r March.

The sedimentary rocks in their great thickness enclose a succession of water sheet, or water-levels occupying distinct stages and extending with uniform characters under whole countries like the strata to which they are subordinated. It is proper to remark here that by the term water-sheet is no meant a real bed of water lodged in a cavity le-tween solid masses that serve as walls to it, but water filling the minute interstices of the cracks of a rock. The Egyptians had recourse to them forty centuries ago: and they were executed in France in 11:6 at Artois, whence the name of artesian wells has been given to them. The water levels of the cretaceous strata, from which the French artesians waters issue, are not always of advantage; but in the north of France and Belgium they constitute the most formidable obstacle which miners have to encounter in reaching the

HOW TO WIN FAME, Using Every Spare Moment of the Day in Some Branch of Study.

He was a postoffice clerk in Inlianapelis, Ind. He was one of the most accomplished men I ever saw. He devote his three hours of leisure every day to various pursuits. The story appears under the head "A Big Soud," and reads as foilows: "There is a big potato on exhibition down at the Continental hotel bar that is probably the most immense vegetable ever grown in this country or any other. It was raised by A. Lapelle ten miles north of this city, and measures 11 feet in length. 3½ feet in diameter, and 9½ feet in circumference, and when weighed on a pair of hay scales was found to tip the beam at 839 pounds. When Mr. Lapelle was digging his potatoes last fall and came across this monster he thou at first he had struck a root of the giant yamahe at first he had struck a root of the glaut yamanetus, a tree of the encalyptus order, now extinct. Fur-ther investigation, however, proved it to be a pota-It took three men and a span of horses a day and a half to dig this potato out of the ground. It was then swung upon a big logging-truck and brought to town. Though it may seem curious, this potato is as fine grained as its smaller brethren, and when sliced up and fried cannot be distinguished from an ordinary potato of good quality. The above figures may not be exact, as the editor has lost his otes on the subject, and is compelled to rely on nemory, but they are near enough for all practical surposes, and offer a weighty argument in the productiveness of our Pacific soil."

To Insure the Payment of Debts. dea is to be realized in the matter of commercial credits. It consists practically of a combination of insurance with theordinary commercial agency. A convass of the wholesale dry goods trade in this city was made nearly a year ago, and the enconragement obtained was sufficient not only to war rant the projectors of the enterprise to go ahead, but also to start up a second concern or precisely the same kind. The rival companies will go into business in about a month, Their plan is to insure the payment of debts by retail merchants throughout the country to the New York wholesalers job bers and manufacturers from whom they buy goods, This seems at first like a wildly reckless un-certaking. Nevertheless, the two companies have been sufficiently capitalized to begin operations on a considerable scale. One of them is already commercial agency for dry goods people. It will keep up its rejorts of the financial standing of all merchants in the dry goods trade, and, in addition for a varying fee will issue a poltcy of insurance against loss on account of any retailer.

The other company will work in the same manner. If a retialer's credit is first rate, it will cost his creditor very little for a policy, but if the former be somewhat shaky the charge for the risk will be value, minus the price of insurance, and interest at 6 per cent from the date of purchase to the date of collection. The expectation is that this method will relieve the wholesalers of much trouble and anxiety. A great deal of interest has been aroused among New York dry goods men as to the out-

From the Chicago Tribune. WASHINGTON, February 27 .- The tariff bill will be reported to the full committee on ways and means next Friday. It is practically finished now, though a meeting of the democrats, who have been framing it, will be held tomorrow night to put on the finishing touches.

Wool, lumber and salt will be added to the free list, and so will a large number of chemicals. Coal and iron ore will not be made free on account of the Pennsylvania and West Virginia opposition. It is also hinted that coal is not added to the free list because the New Englanders persist in standing out against fariff reform. If coal should be admitted duty free the New England people could get that commodity near at hand and much cheaper than commonly near at man and much cheaper than now. It is not to be made free as a punishment for their opposition to general tariff reduction. The rate of duty on steel rails is to be reduced from $17 to $12 a ton, and on pig from from $7 to $5.20. Reductions on other metal schedules will be in about the same proportion. The specific duty on woolen manufactured goods is to be taken off to make up for putting wool on the free list, and the ad valorem duty will be reduced about 20 per cent on high grades of cloth, and more on the cheaper grades of woolen manufacture.

Sugar gets a cut of 22 per cent, and the reductions of the tariff on cotton goods will take all told $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 from the revenues. The abolition of internal tax on all forms of tol-acco, except cigars and cigarettes, and the concessions to the moonshiners by taking the tax from fruit distillation will reduce the revenues from that source about $25,000,000 to $27,000,000. All told, the reductions provided tor in the bill amount to about $75,000,000 or

MR. RANDALL PREPARING HIS BILL Mr. Carlton's Remarks About the Committee's Bill-Appointments of Georgians to Office-Other Gossip.

WASHINGTON, March 3 .- [Special.]-Judge Kelley's views on the tariff bill have been eagerly sought by all parties, in view of his prominence as the high priest of protection, and has membership of twenty years of the committee of ways and means. Having devoted twenty-four hours to the study of the devoted twenty-four nours to the study of the bill he spoke without reserve and characteris-tically, but in general terms.

"What is your opinion of the tariff bill?" "I can't express it freely," said Judge Kellye, "for I don't want to deal harshly with a corpse. It is a bill which is not pervaded by any paramount principle of the doctrine of any school of economy, native or foreign. It is not in accordance with Mr. Mills's declared conviction in favor of the ert J. Walker bill of or of the bill of 1857, which reduced Mr. alker's rates of duty pro rata, and gave us the nearest approach to free trade we have had since the war of 1812. Judging from the clear, but as I think, very mistaken views presented by Mr. Cleveland in his recent message, a brief glance at the strange committing of a high protective tariff on a number of southern productions, and the extreme free trade pro-visions applied to some of the heaviest productive industries, must nauseate him. A carestudy of the bill makes fact that it is constructed on one theory as apparent as are any of its written provisions, and thus explains the mysterious secret preserved by its framers and their austere exclusion of their republican colleagues on the committee from the most casual insight into their operations. The logical basis of the bill is a numerous series of widespread dickers for votes. I know there is not a gentleman who took part in framing that bill who is not incapable of conframing that but who is not incapable of con-apiring deliberately against the interests of his country or any of her people. In con-clusion, let me say that when the business men of the country come to be-that in contrast with Colonel Morrison's bill this one will be remembered as the zig-zag Mr.Candler, in speaking of the tariff bill, as it applies to marble, says that if it was the intention of the committee to prepare the bill for the raw material to come in free of duty, when ble imported than there is of the raw material. If it is the intention of the committee to encourage protection, he is again at sea upon the question, as there is not one person employed in working on manufactured marble, where there are ten who live from their earnings derived heard on the provisions of that bill, they will exhibit its dangers to congress in such a way from labor on the unmanufactured article. Notwithstanding the fact that the tariff is and has been the absorbing topic at the capitol, the friends, of the several gentlemen whose bonnets buzz with vice-presidential bees, have their interest. The most prominent among those spoken of in connection with the second place on the democratic ticket is Governor Gray, of Indiana. A prominent member of the Indiana congressional delegation said to

THE CONSTITUTION correspondent today:

"Governor Gray is probably the strongest man for the second place that could be in-duced to accept it. He is sufficiently well known, and at the same time is not handi-zapped by what I may call a political past. He is a srtong conservative man, and would, in my opinion, make a great fight, which would reault in the carrying of the hoosier state well aver into the camp of the democracy. Gray's views on the tariff and the leading topics of the day are in line with the accepted principles of the party. Of course, Cleveland will head the ticket. Nothing on earth can prevent that. Cleveland and Gray would, to my mind, imake an ideal ticket." While Governor Gray has hosts of friends in Indiana, he is not the only hoosier mentioned as Mr. Cleveland's right bower in the coming campaign. Of late, there has been a

Indiana, Dan Voorhoes. "Gray is a good man," said an Indiana congressman today, "but I believe it would be better policy to push Voorhees for the place. He has been so unfortunate to pose as the seatral figure in a number of seatral figure in a number of alleged episodes described |in the papers with great attention to detail. He is said to with great attention to detail. He is said to have had several stormy interviews with the bresident on matters in which he was person-ally interested, and the latest sensation as to his-treatment at the hands of Secretary Vilas is still fresh in the mind of the public, though ts still fresh in the mind of the public, though Tbelieve the story to have been a pure fabrication. One thing is certain, with those western people who are not enthusiastic over Cleveland, Voorhees is immensely popular, and I believe nothing would promote harmony in the party to such a degree as the nomination of the Indiana senator as vice-president. The ticket would surely carry the state."

In the southwest and on the Pacific coast there is a strong sentiment steadily growing in favor of Assistant Postmaster-General Stevenson. He is looked upon as a Simon pure democrat of the old school, and his management of the postoffice department, partic-pure democrat of the old school, and his management of the postoffice department, particularly in matters of appointments and removals, has been very acceptable to the workers of the party in those sections.

A Texas member said today:

"E. Stevenson would carry the southwest for almost any presidential candidate. He would strengthen Cleveland more than any one who might be nominated."

In Illinois General Black and Morrison divide the democratic following. General Black's friends claim that his popularity with the grand army element in consequence of his Black's friends claim that his popularity with the grand army element in consequence of his war record and the excellent work he has done in the pension bureau, would give him an ad-wantage over almost any jother applicant for place. Morrison, on the other hand, pos-sesses an identification with tariff reform which would make the linking of his name with that of President Cleveland particularly felictious. There is little gossip of eastern cautious. There is little gossip of eastern can Kelley's views on the tarm our have been ea-gerly sought by all parties, in view of his prominence as the high priest of protection, and has membership of twenty years of the committee of ways and means. Having devoted twenty-four hours to the study of the bill he spoke without reserve and characterisbut in general terms. What is your opinion of the tariff bill?" was asked.

Washington.

Kellye, "for I don't want to deal harshly with a corpse. It is a bill which is not pervaded by any paramount principle of the doctrine of any school of economy, native or foreign. It is not in accordance with Mr. Mills's declared conviction in favor of the Robert J. Walker bill of 1846, or of the bill of 1857, which reduced Mr. Walker's rates of duty pro rate, and gaye us Walker's rates of duty pro rata, and gave us the nearest approach to free trade we have had since the war of 1812. Judging from the clear, but as I think, very mistaken views presented Cleveland in his recent mes brief glance at the strange committing of a high protective tariff on a number of southern tions, and the extreme free trade provisions applied to some of the heaviest produ tive industries, must nauseate him. A careful study of the bill makes the fact that it is constructed on one theory as apparent as are any of its written provisions, and thus explains the mysterious secret preserved by its framers and their austere exclusion of their republican colleagues on the committee from the most casual sinsight into their operations. The logical basis of the bill is a numerous series widespread dickers for votes. I know there is not a gentleman who took part in framing that bill who is not incapable of conframing that bill who is not incapable of conspiring deliberately against the interests of his country or any of her people. In conclusion, let me say that when the business men of the country come to be heard on the provisions of that bill, they will exhibit its dangers to congress in such a way that in courtrest with Colonel Morrison's bill that in contrast with Colonel Morrison's bill this one will be remembered as the zig-zag tion of the committee to prepare the bill for review he is at a loss to see why they allowed the raw material to come in free of duty, when In fact there is much less manufactured mar-ble imported than there is of the raw material. If it is the intention of the committee to en-courage protection, he is again at sea upon the question, as there is not one person employed in working on manufactured marble, where there are ten who live from their earnings derived from labor on the unmanufactured article. Notwithstanding the fact that the tariff is and has been the absorbing topic at the capitol, the friends, of the several gentlemen whose bonnets buzz with vice-presidential bees, have found time to start little booms a rolling in their interest. The most prominent among their interest. The most prominent among those spoken of in connection with the second place on the democratic ticket is Governor Gray, of Indiana. A prominent member of the Indiana congressional delegation said to The Constitution correspondent today:

"Governor Gray is probably the strongest man for the second place that could be induced to accept it. He is sufficiently well brown, and at the same time is not head."

duced to accept it. He is sufficiently well known, and at the same time is not handizapped by what I may call a political past. He is a strong conservative man, and would, in my ppinion, make a great fight, which would result in the carrying of the hoosier state well byer into the camp of the democracy. Gray's views on the tariff and the leading topics of the day are in line with the accepted principles of the party. Of course, Cleveland will head the ticket. Nothing on earth can prevent requests for unanimous consent, he demanded the regular order. The speaker pro tem announced the regular order to be the further consideration of the bill to provide for the issue of circulating notes to national banking associations; and as this was a bill which Mr. Bland has uniformly opposed, a laugh was raised against him that he should have unwittingly brought it before the house.

mind, make an ideal ticket While Governor Gray has hosts of friends in Indiana, he is not the only hoosier mentioned as Mr. Cleveland's right bower in the coming campaign. Of late, there has been a great deal of talk of the senior senator from

Indiana, Dan Voorhoes. "Gray is a good man," said an Indiana congressman today, "but I believe it would be better policy to push Voorhees for the place. He has been so unfortunate to pose as the sentral figure in a number of alleged episodes described lin the papers with great attention to detail. He is said to have had several stormy interviews with the president on matters in which he was personally interested, and the latest sensation as to his treatment at the hands of Secretary Vilas is still fresh in the mind of the public, though I believe the story to have been a pure fabrication. One thing is certain, with those western people who are not enthusiastic over Cleveland, Voorhees is immensely popular, and I believe nothing would promote harmony in the party to such a degree as the nomination of the Indiana senator as vice-president. The ticket would surely carry the state."

In the southwest and on the Pacific coast there is a strong sentiment steadily growing in favor of Assistant Postmaster-General Stevenson. He is looked upon as a Simon pure democrat of the old school, and his management of the postoffice department, particularly in matters of appointments and removals, has been very acceptable to the workers of the party in those sections.

A Texas member said today:

"E. Stevenson would carry the southwest for almost any presidential candidate. He would strengthen Cleveland more than any one who might be nominated."

In Illinois General Black and Morrison divide the democratic following. General Black's friends claim that his popularity with the grand army element in consequence of his war record and the excellent work he has done in the pension bureau, would give him an advantage over almost any jother applicant for place. Morrison, on the other hand, possesses an identification with tariff reform which would make the linking of his name with that of President Cleveland particularly felictions. There is little gossip of eastern candidates.

Mr. Randall's tariff bill will be introduced "Gray is a good man," said an Indiana congressman today, "but I believe it would be

The House Takes Up the Bill in Relation t Contracts With the Western Union. WASHINGTON March 3.—The speaker pro-tem laid before the house reports from the first comptroller and commissioner of customs upon claims arising under the eight-hour law. Henry C. Investigation into the subject of trusts. Adopted.

On motion of Mr. Dibble, of South Carolina, a bill was passed appropriating $75,000 for the construction of a revenue cutter for use at Charleston, S. C.

Mr. Dorgan, of South Carolina, from the committee on banking and currency, reported the bill authorizing the issue of fractional silver certificates. Referred to committee of the whole.

Mr. Crain, of Texas, from the committee on election of president and vice-president respectively.

Mr. Crain, of Texas, from the committee on election of president and vice-president, reported back his joint resolution proposing constitutional amendments changing the time for the commencement of the presidential term and changing the date for the annual meeting of congress. Placed on the house calendar.

The house then resumed, as a special order, consideration of the Pacific railroad telegraph bill.

Mr. White of New York took the floor in consideration of the Pacific rattroad telegraph bill.

Mr. White, of New York, took the floor in opposition to the measure. He thought that all remit legislation should "make the punishment fit the crime," and that before lumbering up the statutes with voluminous enactments, legislators should assure themselves that those enactments would have the desired effect. He then proceeded with a legal argument in which he conceded them, under the terms of the contract between the Union Pacific company and the Western Union company, vested right had been created which could not, under the decision of the supreme court in the Union Pacific sinking fund case, be in terfored with by congressional action.

the Union Pacific sinking fund case, be in terfered with by congressional action.

Mr. White said, in conclusion, that he was here to protest against anarchic and communistic legislation, which would seek to legislate away the property of man, acquired honorably and honestly under forms of law.

Mr. Symes, of Colorado, said that the purpose of the bill was merely to compel subsidized railroads to comply with the conditions and provisions of the grants creating them. The contract between the Union and Central Pacific Railroad companies, and the Western Union Telegraph company were void ab initio, and no lawyer in America knew it better than the gentleman from New York, (White). They were, at the time they were made, and still were in violation of the expess provisions and the statutes and the grant creating the

They were, at the time they were made, and still were in violation of the expess provisions and the statutes and the grant creating the Pacific railroad and telegraph companies, and were in violation of public policy and against public law. There were numerous authorities to show that all pooling contracts, with certain limitations, were void, and no contract could be enforced, if its conditions were against the general good. The contracts under consideration had been made with the object and intention of defeating every substantial requirement of the grants. After Jay Gould and his ring had conducted the Union Pacific as long as he could make anything out of it, he had walked off, leaving the company bankrupt and taking with him among the assets the telegraphic lines, with which he levies a discriminating tribute from the people west of the Missouri river.

Mr. Dockery, of Missouri, said that under the granting acts the Pacific companies were required to construct not only railroad lines, but also telegraph lines. Instead of doing so they had assumed to divest themselves of their obligations by a contract with the Western Union telegraph company, conferring upon that company the exclusive right of way along the railroad lines. The acts of congress, requiring that telegraph lines along the Pacific railroads should receive all business without discrimination, were nullified by this unlawful contract with the Western Union company. Upon these unlawful contracts the gentleman from New York (White) had executed a super-Contract with the western Union company. Upon these unlawful contracts the gentleman from New York (White) had crected a super-structure of vested rights. The very language of the contracts showed that the railroad companies knew that they had no right to enter the them. Mr. White offered his substitute, which was a laugh was raised against him that he should have unwittingly brought it before the house. But he accomplished his object, and the house, at 4:45, adjourned.

The Brotherhood Men Refuse to Leave the Reading.

AND THE KNIGHTS ARE RETALIATING By Securing Situations on the Chicago Burlington and Quincy Road—Talks With Railroad Men.

Monday, of the chairman of the griev-ance committees of the engineers and firemen is looked forward to with great anxiety by both the Burlington officials and the brother-hood officers. Upon the outcome of this meet-ing depends the future course of Chief Arthur. Should a reasonable excuse be found for it on any one western road the brotherhood men will probably be called out. It is believed by many that every western road is liable, strict neutrality construction, to have its men taken out by Tuesday morning. Officers of the brotherhood now admit that nothing satisfactory will come of their order to the engineers and firemen of the Reading road to quit work, and dispatches from the east this morning confirm this belief. Now, that the order has not been obeyed the temporary check put upon the knights who came to this city yesterday, to secure the places of strikers, has been removed, and the Burlington can resume the work of biring willing knights. Master Workman Cahill only succeeded in sending back east twenty-five to thirty of the Reading men, and it required inducement in the shape of brotherhood money to accomplish the shape of brotherhood money to accomplish even this much.

At the offices of the Burlington company it was not thought that the brotherhood would carry out their threat to call off engineers and freemen on other western roads.

"Their object, of course," said one official, "is to endeavor to bring such a pressure from the public, and other roads, to bear upon us that will compal us to accede to their demands. the public, and other roads, to bear upon us that will compel us to accede to their demands. We have made no attempt to move through freight, and will not attempt to do so till we have completely mobilized our local traffic. Then we will receive and handle through freight, and should any attempt be made to cut us off from accommodating connecting lines, we will try what virtue there is in the interstate commerce law. interstate commerce law. We can compel other roads to handle our cars, or we can make them pay $5,000 for every car they refuse. We are moving freight trains now almost to the fullest capacity on the Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri lines, and will have our own line service complete next week. The fight on other roads by the brotherhood will be made solid on account of freight traffic."

Summons for a consultation at headquarters of the brotherhood of the leads of the various egrievance committees of the leompeting line of the Burlington road brought in about fifteen of those summoned by noon today. The conference will not be held ntil Monday, as a number of those summoned will not arrive until late tomorrow night. A mass meeting will be held Tuesday night. Chiefs Arthur and Sargent were kept busy today receiving the visiting representatives. Neither of them is very hopeful of any good coming from their order or request to brotherhood men on the Reading to step out of the places of striking knights on the Reading. Already they have given up their efforts to induce eastern men to refuse to work and any work done in that direction will be done by the strikers themselves. They are confident, however, that there are no idle engineers in sufficient number to materially aid the Burlington, and they believe that the Burlington will arrive at the limit of the resources in a few days.

Reading men insist yow that Chief Arthur shall expel the recalcitrants from the brotherhood. Meanwhile, ex-Reading engineers are being sent out to man the Burlington locomotives. At noon tod. a hundred or more of the imported men were in the office of the Briggs house. Half a dozen Burlington striking engineers came in and had long talks with little groups of new arrivals, urging on them what they sailed the unmanliness of their course in taking the places of the strikers.

"If some brotherhood men did go to work on the Reading," said a Burlington man, "that is not our fault. None from here went there. And is it doing you any good to come here and take bread out of the mouths of men who have never wronged you?

"That is true to a certain extent," said the Reading man: "but Mr. Arthur is running

"That is true to a certain extent," said the Reading man; "but Mr. Arthur is running this thing. I tell you, we can never forget the morning after the tie up on our road, when we saw Arthur walk down the main track at Richmond, Pa., with President Corbin, pat him on the back and head him say: "I'll get you a man to fill every place vacant. I am with you in this,' and then we can be therefore any correct which down the we saw brothernood engineers walk down the track and take our places. I am willing to do anything to help a man in this struggle for better pay, but I have a wife and six children, and they have nothing to eat. I put my money, as fast as I could save it, into payments on my little home, and then Arthur and his brotherhood took my job and left me pennileas."

Sixteen men, it is said, were sent back today, the brotherhood paying their fare and something to boot.

THE MISSISSIPPI LEGISLATURE. A Bill Passed to Reduce the Number of

In the proposed redistricting Judges Featherston, Wharton and Roane are left out, and Chancellors McLaurin, Kimbrough, Williamson, Peyton and Critz, all of whose present terms are about to expire. The house refused to concur in the various senate amendments, increasing the general appropriation bill, except as to providing for the payment of interest on the Chickasaw school fund, which was reduced, and a committee of conference was asked, which was appointed and is headed on the part of the house by Burkitt. The house passed a large number of local bills, as did the senate, which also passed a bill which appropriates ten thousand dollars for the erection of a confederate monument. This bill went to the house, but a motion to suspend the rules and consider it failed. The governor has signed the bill providing for pensioning disabled confoderate soldiers. It is not probable that the legislature will adjourn sine die before Friday of next week.

CARLISLE'S OPINION.

CHICAGO, March 3.—A Times special from Wichita, Kansas, says:

"Hon. John G. Carlisle, who is in the city attending the bedside of his sick son, said today."The Mills tariff bill is a very conservative measure and ought to be passed, the financial and industrial situation would have justified a much more radical measure, but there are always so many differences of opinion about details that it is impossible to do exactly what ought to be done. The bill has been prepared with great care, and I know that it has been the purpose of its framers to deal fairly and liberally with any interest affected by it. There has been no feeling of hostility to the capital or labor employed in the manufacturing industries, and the bill, if passed, will not hurt them. Wool, flax, her.p, jute, dyestuffs and many other raw materials are placed upon the free list, at d this will largely reduce the cost of production without reducing the wages of labor. The consumer will thus be enabled to get cheaper goods while the manufacturer will realize ample profits, and the former will continue to receive the same or higher wages. I think the bill will pass substantially as reported. If it be defeated, the democratic party will appeal to the people on this question at the next election, and a congress will be chosen will appeal to the people on this question at the next election, and a congress will be chosen that will reduce the revenue much more than

Just before the company began to look into the management of its office here, Hill advertised in the New York World for a partner. He stated that he had a business of $5,000 a year, and wanted some one to help him share the profits. The advertisement brought a pile of answers. Among others was one from J. R. Vyle. Hill liked the tone of Vyle's letter, and wrote to him, urging him to come to Savannah. He added that as the new partner would handle a great deal of the cash, he would require $330 security. Vyle came and had an interview with the insurance agent. Hill gave Mr. Vyle a roseate idea, in a general way, of his business. Vyle was willing to give security but he wanted to see Hill's books before putting up cash security. Hill made excuses for not showing his books. While he was endeavoring to work $350 out of Vyle a special agent arrived, and Vyle is worth $350 more than he would be if the agent had been a few days later.

A Peculiarly Atrocious Case in Edgefield

South Carolina. COLUMBIA, S. C., March 3.—[Special.]—The court of general sessions will meet in Edge-field on Monday. There are always murder cases in this county, but at the coming session a peculiarly diabolical murder case will be brought to trial. Six persons—four men and two women—are charged with the cold-blooded murder of a deaf mute. The murdered man was the husband of one of the women, who wished to get rid of him and marry another man. She, it is charged, conspired with another woman and her sweetheart to remove her husband. One night, early in the winter, the mute was murdered and buried in the garden, and his wife disappeared with another man. Persons passing the house saw the fingers and toes of the murdered man above ground and gave the alarm. It is probable that at least one of the women and one man will be sentenced to be hanged. Berlin, March 3.—Since his family have recognized that a fatal issue is most probable the crown prince himself has expressed an urgent desire to return to Berlin, as soon as possible. He has stated his intention to the emperor, who, conciliating with the crown prince, has relinquished his proposed journey to San Remo. The respites from suffering win protony be needed again in the near future, and the fatal rope, noose and all, still dangles from the arm.

A few nights after the hanging, several negro prisoners were standing at one of the fail windows and looking down at the scaffold. As the city hall bell ceased tolling the hour of midnight they saw the dark-robed form of George Williams ascend the scaffold and again stand on the fatal trap. Invisible hands drew the black cap over his face and adjusted the noose. A moment later the terrified watchers heard the regulation dull thud, and the body of George was again dangling from the scaffold. There was a howl of terror from the prisoners which aroused every inmate of the jail, and for a time pandemonium reigned. The story of the ghost was passed from cell to cell, and the negro prisoners slept no more that night. When midnight came again every window was crowded with prisoners watching for the ghost. They were not disappointed. that the crown prince obtains encourages the confidedce that he will be enabled to return to Berlin. If he is fated to die suddenly at San Remo he has everything ready. He has written Remo he has everything ready. He has written his will and prepared a political testament for his successor. The presence of Prince William at the villa has cheered his mother and the princesses. Comments adverse to Prince William continue to be heard in Berlin society. Significance is attached to the fact that none of the family met him at San Remo station, where he arrived from Genoa in company with Prince Henry, his brother, and Professor Bergman. He was received by a prefect, the mayor and German consul. This arrangement was due to the crown prince, who sent instructions to Prince William at Carlsruhe. It was commented on that Dr. Bergman would meet him, the obvious object being to enable him to gain a full knowledge of the condition of his father before seeing his mother and sisters, The crown princess and princesses awaited him within the villa. It is understood he received the warmest welcome and that many tears were shed during the interview. Twenty minutes after his arrival, the crown princess alone accompanied him to meet his father. During yesterday and today Prince William has been with the crown prince on the balcony and there was every appearance of cordiality between father and son. Reports of coolness in their relations are chiefly traceable to French sources. The French papers vie with each other in malicious inventions. During the journey from his will and prepared a political testament for Carlsruhe, Prince William obtained a number of French papers and was excited to anger by stories in them of his selfish intentions toward the crown prince, and callous disregard of his father's sufferings. Throughout Germany public interest in news from San Remo grows intensely. The people of Berlin await dispatches with the same eagerness and agitation as would be shown in a campaign involving the fate of the nation.

The strong feeling of sympathy for the German physicians shown by the people, is being daily increased by the suppression of full official news, and by reports from an official source of quarrels between Drs. McKenzie and Bergman, over the treatment of the crown The Men Upon Whom the Popular Eye is Resting.

CEAWFORDVILLE, Ga., March 3.—[Special.]
Our superior court has adjourned. During the week there was a free intercharge of opinion as to coming candidates. Hon. T. G. Veazey has served the people of this county the past four years and they are well pleased with him. He will not seek a re-election having retired to his beautiful country home. Mr. W. T. Flynt and Mr. George Brown are favorably spoken of by their respective friends. They are both modest young men, highly respected by the people. Mr. Owen D. Moore is also spoken of but it is doubtful whether he will agree to allow the use of his name. He is the largest planter in the county, he has frequently been urged but would never consent to become a candidate. The friends of Hon. T. E. Bristow, who was the last senstor from this county, would like to use his name and probably will do so if he will allow it. Warren county under the rotation system will furnish the senator. We hear of several prominently spoken of by Warren county people. Mr. J. H. Hall and Mr. James Whitehead, neither of whom has ever served the people in the general Easembly, but enough is known of general Easembly, but enough is known of Bergman, over the treatment of the crown prince's disease. The tone of several German prince's disease. The tone of several German newspapers increases public irritation.

The Madgeburg Zeitung declares that the German people owe nothing to Dr. McKenzie, and that the fact that the crown prince's lite is still preserved, is solely owing to Drs. Braman, Bergman and Schrader.

The National Zeitung predicts an imminent crisis unless the Bergman treatment, with the use of the German tube, is definitely adopted. These opinions are generally accepted, combined with views affirming the maintenance of Dr. MacKenzie's hold on the crown prince and crown princess, and are admaintenance of Dr. MacKenzie's hold on the crown prince and crown princess, and are adding to the lasting unpopularity of the crown princess. Hence arises rumors that the crown princess and her daughters will go to reside in England after the death of the crown prince. During the week Bismarck had long conferences with Emperor William, it is supposed, with reference to the proposal to grant Prince William power to sign in the event of the emperor's incapacitation. The crown prince differs with Bismarck on the question of a regency of this character. It is reported that the emperor accedes to proposal admitting the force of Bismarck's plea that the simultaneous illness of himself and the crown prince might create confusion in the management of public affairs.

SAVANIAH, Ga., March 3.—[Special.]—On Monday the March term of the superior court will convene. The docket is heavy on both the civil and criminal sides, and the term will be a long one.

Birmingham, Ala., March 3.—[Special.]—The Jefferson county jail probably holds more Christian negroes than any jail in the country, and, instead of worldly songs and curses as of old, the visitor now hears prayers and songs of praise. The reformation of the majority of the 150 colored prisoners is due to the ghost of George Williams, who was jerked to death on 23d day of last December. George was hanged for the marder of a fellow-convict at Pratimines. The scaffold for the hanging of Williams was erected in the jailyard, immediately under the windows of the upper floor of the jail. The hanging was witnessed by as many of the prisoners as could crowd around the small-tron-barred windows. The sight impressed them deeply, and many of them, hardened criminals as they were, turned away with a shudder. The gallows was left standing, as it will probably be needed again in the near future, and the fatal rope, noose and all, still dangles from the arm.

A Neglected Issue.

If our congressmen are as solicitou about the interests of the farmer as they profess to be, it is a little singular that they do not institute measures that would go far toward relieving him of the burden of competition in the markets of the world. Silver coin passes at par in the United States, but the fact remains that silver is, to all intents and purposes, demonetized. It was demonetized locally by the act of 1873, and | believe, is Mills. the Bland bill gave local relief, but it was altogether local.

In India, silver, coined or in bullion, is worth as much as gold. India has free coinage. In London, silver is worth twenty-five per cent less than gold. Now, when a merchant has ten thousand bushels of wheat to sell, he could sell it in London for $10,000 in silver, valued there at only $7,500. He could then take the silver to India and pay it out for $10,000, thus making a gain of 331 per cent. The result of this is shown in the increased shipments of wheat to Europe from India. In 1874 the shipments amounted to 95,000 bushels. In 1885 they amounted to 12,500,000 bushels. This increase is due solely to the premium on gold in Great Britain. What is true of wheat is also true of corn and cotton. As the price of silver declines, so the price of all our farm products decline, and we have nobody to thank for it but the ineffable quality of statesmanship which owns the whisky ring as its

The prediction of Sir Robert Fowler is rapidly coming true, and yet re-establish himself, and in a quarter of a there has never been a day since he made it that our whisky ring statesmen have not had the remedy in their own hands. What is that remedy? There is but one-the free coinage of silver.

Fire Losses and Fire Insurance, The Philadelphia Financial Critic calls attention to the prevalence of fire losses since the first of the year, and remarks that If they continue at the same rate they will bankrupt half the fire insurance companies in the east. Our contemporary says:

in the east. Our contemporary says:

It has already had its effect on the market price of some of the principal companies, their market price having speedily declined, until it is now almost impossible to get a bid for the stock of some companies that a few months ago were eagerly sought after. The losses during 1887 were the largest ever known, and some of the companies were materially weakened; but the first two months of this year stand unrivaled, the losses being enormous—larger than ever known—and coming at a time when they are less able to stand it. The surplus that has been accumulated in years of comparative immunity is rapidly decreasing under what may properly be styled an epidemic, and though no company has yet shown any embarrasment, it will be well for stockholders to carefully scrutinize the be well for stockholders to carefully scrutinize the assets of their respective companies. Some very conservative companies have anticipated a contin-nance of the present rate and have gone into liquiuance of the present rate and have gone into liquidation—a course that may be largely appreciated by their stockholders, and one that would be good to imitate by those not in the strongest position.
While the present duliness continues in the stock market it will be prudent to watch the fire insurance stocks, as it may be that the duliness will be broken by a source hardly anticipated. It is a welknown axiom of the "street" that "the unexcated always harmons" ected always happens."

As the Critic puts it, the warning may prove unneccessary, but it will harm nobody to keep well posted.

It is to be observed that the heaviest cuts in the tariff are on articles in which the farmers are interested. Wool, sugar, rice, etc. The list is an entertaining one.

Ir has been discovered that the cut in the duty on sugar amounts to more than 30 per cent. The result is that the Louisiana delegation in congress will solidly oppose the bill. The probability is that Statesman Mills will be in quite a stew before he gets through with the tariff. A Reduction of Passenger Rates. he action of the Western and Atlantic railroad in voluntarily reducing its passenger rates, and in requesting the Georgia railroad commission to recognize and authorize that commission to recognize and authorize that action, has had a very salutary effect. It has not only given the people along the line cheaper rates of travel, but it has had the effect of giving a cue to the railroad commis

The question is, if the Western and Atlantic railroad is moved to reduce its passenger rates as a matter of business policy, why would not a similar reduction be a good policy for other trunk lines? This is the question that the railroad commission will require the railways of this state to

To this end, as was set forth in our news columns yesterday, MajorCampbell Wallace, the chairman of the commission, has issued a circular, notifying the railroads that on the 18th of March the commission will meet for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety of readjusting and equalizing the passenger fares on the roads doing business in this state. The companies are requested to have representatives present at meeting, so that the commission may have the benefit of their views.

The commission has already prepared schedule of passenger rates, and this will be presented to the representatives of the railroads at the meeting on the 13th, for their consideration. There can be no doubt that the proposition of the commission to reduce the passenger fares on the railroads of the state to a basis which bears some relation to the reduction recently made on the Western and Atlantic, will be heartily approved by for January. The increase in December was the people; and, after the reduction has borne its fruits, there can be no doubt that the managers of the railroads will heartily indorse it. Low passenger rates increas travel, and it has been demonstrated that they are more profitable than high rates, except in cases which are provided for by the commission's schedule. It was predicted by some of the railroad managers, when the commission's rate of three cents a mile was put in operation, dred tons of white paper, or nearly one that their lines would lose money on the passenger business, but the result has not justified their views. There has been an increase of travel, and an increase of income from the passenger business. We may say, therefore, that the change which the commission proposes to make are as important to the railroads as they are to the people, and we have no idea, after the example which has been set by the Western and Atlantic, that there will be any serious opposition on the part of the roads to the proposed reduction, Ups and Downs.

The newspapers every day contain an account of the suicide of some man who ha met with a reverse of fortune. When such an unfortunate does not kill himself outright, he bewails his fate and complains that when a man is down everybody is ready to give him a kick.

It is refreshing to turn from these un happy examples to such a man as Dr. William A. Hammond, of New York. Nearly twenty-five years ago, Dr. Hammond was the surgeon general of the army, residing in Washington. He had a host of friends, mayor, said at a meeting of the chamber of a high position, and a large income. All this was changed, however, by a summons tor was found guilty of irregularities in liquor contracts, and was dismissed from the army. The disgraced physician, so far from being cast down, vowed that he would century return without a stain on his name. and with a greater reputation than ever

On the 11th day of October, next year the twenty-five years will expire, and Dr Hammond will then return to Washington During his voluntary exile, he has more than redeemed himself. As far back as 1878 he had built up a large practice in New York. In that year he procured a review of the proceedings of the court martial. The sentence was reversed, and he was restored to the army as surgeon-general, and with the rank of brigadier general, on the retired list. He would have been cordially received if he had returned to his old home but he awaited the expiration of the limit of his voluntary exile. He devoted himself to his profession with renewed energy, and found time to win a name in literature. The doctor is now having an elegant res idence built in Washington, and a magnificent private hospital for his patients. This remarkable man is made of the right stuff. Yet, there was a time in his life, when, in the eyes of the world, he was ruined. Instead of committing suicide, or shutting himself up, he began again at the bottom round of the ladder. His final success is not due to luck. He has won the fight by his pluck. Louisville, Ga., March 2.-Editors Constitution: For several years I have been your agent and a subscriber to your paper, and of recent dates I have been reading accounts, given by your corres-pondents, of the battle of the Wilderness—a battle which I was engaged in. I was a member of which I was engaged in. I was a member of company A, 28th Georgia regiment, Colquit's brigade, Hoke's division, Jackson's corps. After the battle I was passing from my detail to my command, and in doing so I passed a young man of the northern army, who was wounded, I think in the thigh, and was unable to get away. The fire was burning rapidly toward him, in thirty or forty feet of him. I raked the leaves from around him, to keep the fire off, as he was not able to get away, which saved his life. I saw him as I returned back from my command. He insisted on my taking ten dollars for saving his life, which I declined, as he was a wounded prisoner. Being one of the larges operators in tobaccos in the south, it is reasonable operators in tobaccos in the south, it is reasonable I would be quite conversant with the operation of the internal revenue laws. It is possibly to my individual interest to have the internal revenue tax retained on tobaccos, but it is very burdensome and oppressive on the people. The internal revenue on tobaccos and cigars consumed by the people of Georgia, collected by the United States government, amounts to about a half million dollars, while it makes an additional cost to the consumer. makes an additional cost to the consume, while it makes an additional cost to the consumer in Georgia, of about one million dollars per annum. Abolish it.

Now about the whisky tax. Let the tax be retained, as it now is, or increased, and have the entire internal tax collected from whisky be returned to the states in proportion to their population without any instructions whatever as to what disposition shall be made with the money so refunded. This would insure the reasonable control of the whisky trafic, and would reduce direct taxes by the state government to a nominal sum, thus making every property owner in favor of the internal revenue have with a very large majority of the moral, wealthy and intelligent element of each state. The fact that this money would be paid back to the states in proportion to their population without instructions, leaving each state perfectly free to make such disposition of the money as she deemed proper and wise, would satisfy every farge majority of the "state's rights" element, and relieve that objection which would otherwise exist if the general government presumed to dictate as to the disposition of this fund. I think it probable this plan would satisfy every faction in this country, materially reducing the surplus, and relieve that objection of this fund. effort to sweep the internal revenue tax law upon liquer from our national statutes.

Under this system has been fostered the mightlest foe which temperance has yet had to meet—the giant money power. Let us take a few facts in the history of the taxation scheme to prove our point.

July 1st, 1862, congress imposed a tax of twenty cents per gallon upon distilled liquors. The act went into effect on the 1st of September following. March 7th, 1864, the tax was raised to sixty cents per gallon. This tax was raised June 30th, 1864, to $1.50 per gallon on all distilled liquors, save brandy distilled from grapes—from July 1st, 1864, to February 1st, 1865.

rv 1st. 1865. December 22d, 1864, the tax was raised to $1.00 per gallon on all liquors distilled from other materials than apples, grapes, or peaches, after April 1st, 1865. 1834, twenty-five cents per gallon. This was raised to fifty cents, March 3d, 1865.

By act of March 3, 1865, spirits distilled from approximately approximately act of March 3, 1865, spirits distilled from approximately approx ples or peaches were taxed $1.50 per gallon. This was raised July 18, 1866, to $2.00 per gallon for soir gallon rate. July 20, 1868, however, the three f gallon rate. July 20, 1868, however, the three inits—apples, grapes and peaches—were all put upon the same footing with other spirit-producing materials, and all distilled liquors paid fifty cents per gallon.

By act of June 6, 1872, the tax upon all was raised to seventy cents per gallon, and March 3, 1875, to minety cents per gallon.

The tax upon malt liquors has, sinceJuly 1, 1862, been $1.00 per barrel, save from March 3, 1863, to April 1, 1864, when the tax was reduced to sixty cents per barrel.

April 1, 1004, when the tax was cents per barrel.
Such have been the rates of assessment levied by the federal government upon distilled and fermented liquors. What has been the effect upon the production of these spirits?

As the rate was so often changed during the first rom 20 cents to $2 per gallon. For 1870 we have 78,490,198 gallons; tax 50c. per gallon.

For 1871 we have 62,314.628 gallons; tax 50c. per gallon. For 1872 we have 66,235,578 gallons; tax 50c. per Oc. June 6, 1872. For 1874 we have 62,581,562 gallons; tax 70c. per gallon.
For 1875 we have 64,425,911 gallons; tax 90c. after March 3, 1875.
For 1876 we have 58,512.693 gallons; tax 90c. per gallon,

For 1878 we have 50,704,189 gallons; tax 90c. per gallon.
For 1879 we have 53,025,175 gallons; tax 90c. per For 1880 we have 62,132,415 gallons; tax 90c. per gallon.

For 1881 we have 69,127,206 gallons; tax 90c. per For 1882 we have 71,976,398 gallons; tax 90c. per gallon.
For 1883 we have 76,762,063 gallons; tax 90c. per gallon.

For 1884 we have 79,616.901 gallons; tax .90c. per gallon.
For 1885 we have 69,158,025 gallons; tax 90c. per gallon.
For 1886 we have 81,849,447 gallons; tax 90c. per gallon.

Thus from 16,149,954 gallons in 1863 we find the product has grown to 81,849,447 gallons in 1886, more than five-fold.

The mait Hquor production for the first six months of the revenue (September 1862 to March 1863) was 885,272 barrels. For the fiscal year 1886 the product was 642,088,513 gallons—an increase of about fifteen fold.

885, 272 barrels. For the fiscal year 1886 the product was 642,088,513 gallons—an increase of about fifteen fold.

In 1800 the per capita average of liquors of all kinds was about five gellons; in 1887 it is nearly thirteen gallons. These statistics certainly ought to be conclusive as to the effect of the revenue upon the consumption of liquors. But the revenue upon the consumption of liquors. But the revenue has been still more formidable in the way of temperance workers. It has banded and unified the liquor traffic throughout the United States. It has extended its arteries from Maine to Texas and California. Who ever heard of a liquor dealer's association before the civil war? The internal revenue system is the foundation stone upon which rests this whole associated power of liquor. Under it the doggeries and barrooms of the olden time have grown into the elegant, alluring saloons of the present. Legislatures and congress have gone down upon their bellies before this giant and humbly promised to do his bidding. Propose to enforce prohibition in Maine or Kansas, and the dominant party is put upon notice that New York, Indiana and other doubtful states will be turned over to the democrats. Vote upon a prohibitory amendment in Texas or in Tennessee, and the democrats are told that the doubtful states shall be given to the republicaus. State sovereignty under this internal revenue system is impossible. Do Georgia democrats know that the liquor dealers' association of this state have proposed to the republicaus to turn the state over to that party, provided the latter would promise them (the dealers) protection against prohibitory laws? A circular sent out to the liquor vendors of the state in 1885, while the local option bill was pending, directed the vendors to see that not one of the legisiators who voted for the bill should be granted to temtors who voted for the bill should be relative and other general assembly.

No greater legislative aid could be granted to temperance than a repeal of the internal revenue laws. When the money power is taken out of this huge monopoly, then will we begin to see the beginning of the end to the liquor rule.

A Preposterous Project.

From the New York Graphic. The proposed formation in the city of New York of a society to be called "The Modern Malthusians," whose object will be the restriction of an increase in the population by imposing a tax on all births, is simply the adoption of a wild idea of one thenry Gregory Forsyth, of Maine, who a few years ago made a great splurge in the same direction, but under the title of "The College of Aryan Ameri-

This new vision is said to be backed by a score or nore of old gentlemen, who have a fear that the loctrine of Malthus will have a realization on the Island of Manhatian before very many years, and that we will be crowding each other into the bay. Henry Gregory Forsyth's idea was that a certain ortion of the earth's population was intended to be ulers and a certain portion servitors. It is needless rulers and a certain portion servitors. It is needless to add that Mr. Forsyth belonged to the former class. He maintained that the rulers should dictate to the working classes absolutely and regulate their domestic as well as political relations. It was a harmless pastime and never amounted to anything. Kierman's News agency gives the following statement from one of the important "insiders" on Richmond Terminal: "When Mr. Sully was elect-ed president it was with the understanding that he resident it was with the understanding that he dd resign before March 1. He gave his word to this effect in the presence of a number of gentleme this effect in the presence of a number of gentlemen connected with the company. If he has resigned I do not know it. He is absent from the city, and has been taken sick, I beleve, in Florida. We want him to resign, but if he chooses to violate his piedge we cannot make him resign. I know of no call for anyl meeting to take action on the subject." A director friendly to Mr. Sully says: "There is dissatisfaction in the company. Certain interests want Mr. Sully to retire, and he is willing to resign, but not under pressure. I do not know that his resignation is in suy one's hands."

The President's Great Dignity.

From the Jacksonville News-Herald. From the Jacksonville News-Herald.

Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, has given proof during his Florida trip that he is possessed of an abundance of good nature as well as of dignity. The little episode at the Palatka station in the darkness of Thursday night well illustrates this. A flippant young man in the crowd cried out somewhat familiarly, "Sorry you ain't going to stop with us longer, Grover." To which the president replied, in precisely the same vien, "You ain't so sorry as I am." This retort was made without the least surrender of dignity on the part of the pesident. It was unexpected, to be sure, and a triffe unconventional, but it just fitted the time, the place and the conditions.

Summer Gone Glimmering. "Now is the summer of our discontent made

At least Mr. H. I. Kimball says it has been. With the new refrigerating process invented by Mr. Fuller-by the condensation and expansion of anhydrous ammonia-temperature is reduced to any desired point. To illustrate and to quote: "You can put one of these machines in your cel lar. Fit your diningroom with a small pipe run-ning along the cornice in the ceiling. Your wife has a tea in August. The diningroom is swelter-ing. Turn on the cold, just as you would turn on the heat at your register, the temperature dr

"It is the converse then of a fireplace?" "No, but of a register. All that a register will do in warming your house, this will do in cooling it. In ten minutes you can by simply turning the cold on, reduce the temperature of your bedroom from ninety to seventy degrees. You need no ice in you pantry or refrigerator. By turning this pipe in you can keep your terries, butter or meats at absolutely whatever temperature you desire. You can trees water in a cask in five minutes or frapper a basket of champagne. If you need ice for table use you can freeze your own ice in a few minutes from distilled water in little shapes or exact as cut

You cannot hold the freshness and flavor o a peach by refrigeration, as the dampuess rots them. Our process is perfectly dry, and I have eaten a peach pulled when full ripe and kept for six months. It was as delicious as on the August day it was pulled. Cars fitted with our machines will carry the ripest peaches a week without losing color or flavor."

"It eliminates, ice then, from use?"

"It will. A man whose ice bill is $10 a month can do all the ice does and cool his house besides at less than a tenth of that sum with our process. you read as a child of Aladdin and his wonderful lamp? What a story that was! The deep cave with its piles of diamonds and rubles and its heaps of gold! The genii that came when the lamp was rubbed and the palaces that grew at a touch! Well, Aladdin is discounted, and the lamp is outdone by the oil. He was the king of the lamp. There are three kings of the oil that could make Aladdin ashamed of his little-jugglery. They are Messrs. Rocksfeller, Bostick and Flagler, the bosses of the Standard Oil commany. That are worth over of the Standard Oil company. They are worth over $50,000,000 each, and by the scratch of a pen can add millions to their wealth. Did Aladdin ever conjure up a pelace to equal the Ponce de Leon hotel, built by Mr. Flagler, the least of the trio, at St. Augustine? It cost $4,000,000 and he calls it "a plaything," built because he had nothing else to do with his money. Mr. Bostick, another of the trio, is a great Baptist and has within a year or so given over $500,000 to Baptist schools and colleges in the south. Mr. Rockafeller is represented in Atlanta by Spellman school for negrees and a training school for nurses, which he practically supports and fine buildings for which he has erected.

THE TARIFF BILL. For and Against the Measure-What the Newspapers Say. From the Indianapolis Jonrual.

The methods pursued by the committee in faming the bill have been thoroughly unfar and unbusinesslike. They have started in to enforce a theory and a preconceived plan, and have rejected all information and advice that did not conform to it. Their proceedings have been conducted on a kind of star-chamber plan, with an evident purpose to shut out all information except such as came through free trade channels. A bill cone ived in such a spirit must necessarily abound with mischievons blunders and crudities, which, now that

That there will be an outcry from the special That there will be an outery from the special interests that have so long enjoyed the privilege of levying a tax for their own benefit upon the whole body of consumers is to be expected. But if the protected interests are wise they will yield somathing rather than imperil all. There must be a beginning. The people of this country will not submit much longer to be taxed clear up to the war maximum. They resent the monstrous injustice of paying 5140,000 000 a year beyond the needs of the government.

From the Macon Telegraph. The measure, as a whole, is in no sense The measure, as a whole, is in the radical departure from the policy of protection. The tariff will still be protective. In it, however an attempt is made to reduce taxation which is unaccessarily high, and to give the consumer a better show for the worth of his money. From the Augusta Chronicle.

We would regard it a great mistake were the ways and means committee to neglect an amend ment to the internal revenue system. Whether wisely or unwisely, the friends of the protective wisely or unwisely, the friends of the process tariff and the advocates of a low tariff system have suffered an estrangement over the method of raducing redundant taxation. For Mr. Mills to insist upon the tariff reduction as the only way of lightening taxation would be supremest folly. For Mr. Randall to declare that he would accept nameasure which reduced the duties uron produce duplicated by American industries, would be bad policy and unsound statesmanship. We cannot say whether this bill will pass of not, If it is defeated at this session of congress, the people will have to pass on it next November. The expressions of sentiment from all sections of the country leave no room for doubt as to what their decision will be. If tariff reform is defeated by this congress, it will be the monopolists who will suffer by it. The patience of the people is about exhausted, and if they do not get tariff reform now, they may demand tariff desiruction this fall; and if they do, the monopolists must take the consequences of their own greed.

The democrats have got a good cause and a popular cause. Let them make a bold fight.

I can say, and with pardonable pride, that I, as an apprentice under my father, was taught the necessity of purity and accuracy in every branch of the drug business. This principle was further instilled during my course at the college of pharmacy, the diploma of which I now hold. The Peninsula Chock Full.

Returning tourists from Florida report it chock full from one end to the other. The drift of heaviest travel holds to the eastern shore from St. Augustine down to Port Ormond, on the Halifax, to Rock Ledge, on Indian river. Along this route the hotels and boarding houses are packed, though the crowd is how diminishing a bit.

The best hunting and fishing is to the west, among the lakes at Kissimmee, and below, and marooning parties fill the hotels in that section. There are yachts, steamers, isnuches and sloops on most of the lakes for charter, that under good pilots find hunting and fishing ground.

President Cleveland is quoted as saying that Rock Ledge is the most delightful place to be found in Florida. He took lunch there; the hotel was beauti-fully decked with flowers and fruits and Mr. Lee presented his guests to the president and Mrs. Cleve-

The rush of visitors this season makes Florida safe for the future. In fair competition with Catt-fornia our peninsula has whipped the fight and the tide of travel next winter will not be seriously diverted toward the Rockies and beyond.

A Great House—Its History.

The house of Moore, Marsh & Co., in this city, will sell $2,000,000 worth of goods this year.

Mr. W. A. Moore and Mr. E. W. Marsh, the founders of this house, have been pariners for thirty-five years. They were rival merchants in the forties, in LaFayette, in Walker county, which was then the most promising town in north Georgia. It was a great trading point and the two young merchants tested each other's metal daily from opposite sides of the courthouse square. When the State road was finished to Chattanooga it left LaFayette high and dry.

The two rivals then met and determined to join forces and seek a larger city. Galveston, Memphis and St. Louis were then the three prominent points of the south. Each was discussed, each abandoned and Chattanooga selected with the hope of holding the country trade that had formerly stopped at Larger the country trade that had formerly stopped at Larger the country trade that had formerly stopped at Larger the Mastering $25,000 between them, the two young country merchants went to Chattanooga and opened business. They remained for ten years, when the war drove them out. Mr. Moore settled in Decatur and Mr. Marsh bought and ran "The Rebel," and employed Henry Watterson and Albert Roberts ("John Hoppy") as his editors.

In 1865 the two partners came together and immediately began a wholesale business in dry goods, notions, and boots and shoes. The first year they barely paid expenses. Calico prints that now sell at $25 cents then ranged from 28 to 33 cents a yard. The freig'st traffic was so wretched that it took goods from a month to six weeks to reach. Atlanta from New York. "From seven hundred to twelve hundred dollars per acre. A banker in Riedsville told me of a negrow ho had three acres on which he worked evenings after the factory closed, and deposited with the banker thirteen hundred dollars, the precedent three acres. This is the only region in America where the annual crop raised upon a given area of land is worth three times as much as the land where the annual crop raised upon a given area of laud is worth three times as much as the land itself. A farmer said he could stand on the front plazza of his country home and see the home of farmers who had over one hundred thousand dollars loaned out a uniterest. Within a few years the cities of Riedsville and Durham have grown from six to ten thousand people, and brighter or more prosperous places I never saw."

THE TARIFF BILL. For and Against the Measure-What the Newspapers Say. From the Indianapolis Jonrual. From the Indianapolis Journal.

The methods pursued by the committee in framing the bill have been thoroughly unfair and unbusinesslike. They have started in to enforce at theory and a preconceived plan, and have rejected all information and advice that did not conform to it. Their proceedings have been conducted on a kind of star-chamber plan, with an evident purpose to shut out all information except such as came through free trade channels. A bill conc.ived in such a spirit must becessarily abound with mischievous blunders and crudities, which, now that the lights are turned on, will soon appear.

From the Philadelphia Press.
But Mr. Mills has overreached himself.

From the Philadelphia Press,

But Mr. Mills has overreached himself. He has been forced in carrying out this tortuous policy to present a bill which will neither stand the study of the committee room, the detates of the house of the tests of a roll-call. It will be beaten in detail because it cannot be defended in principle. It will collapse under criticism and fall to he of together the coalition of conflicting interests which it needs to secure its passage. A single isolated reduction like quinnne might be passed by a snap judgment of the house, but no series of snap judgment of the house to give a measure like this a majority in the divisions of the committee of the whose or the roll-calls of the house.

That there will be an outcry from the special That there will be an outery from the special interests that have so long enjoyed the privilege of levying a tax for their own benefit upon the whole hody of consumers is to be expected. But if the protected interests are wise they will yield some thing rather than imperil all. There must be a beginning. The people of this country will not submit much longer to be taxed clear up to the war maximum. They resent the monstrous injustice of paying $140,000 000 a year, beyond the needs of the government. From the Macon Telegraph.

The measure, as a whole, is in no sense a radical departure from the policy of protection. The tariff will still be protective. In it, however an attempt is made to reduce taxation which is unnecessarily high, and to give the consumer a better show for the worth of his money.

From the Augusta Chronicle.

We would regard it a great mistake were the ways and means committee to neglect an amendament to the internal revenue system. Whether wisely or unwisely, the friends of the protectivatariff and the advocates of a low tariff system have suffered an estrangement over the method of reducing redundant taxation. For Mr. Mills to insist upon the tariff reduction as the only way of liebtening taxation would be supremest foily. For Mr. Randall to declare that he would accept ne measure which reduced the duties uron product duplicated by American industrics, would be bed policy and unsound statesmanship.

We cannot say whether this bill will pass of not. If it is defeated at this session of congress, the people will have to pass on it next November. The expressions of sentiment from all sections of the country leave no room for doubt exto what their decision will be. If tariff reform is defeated by this congress, it will be the monopolists who will suffer by it. The patience of the people is about exhausted, and if they do not get tariff reform now, they may demand ariff desiruction this fall; and if they do, the monopolists must take the consequences of their own greed.

The Invigorine has caused every member of my bousehold to rejoice in the benefit conferred on my wife. I have tried it myself in several cases. I can conscientiously say that it has strengthened me more than any other remedy I ever tried.

Marching Orders Received.

Nothing like it ever seen before in the south. Atlanta has been invaded again, but not by the Grand Army of the Republic, but by 300,000 Grand Republic cigars. A Constitution representative heard they were coming, and went down to head-quarters—Mr. W. A. Russell's, on Peachtree, and saw them com in. It was a sight. When load after load was placed in front of his store, the cases that contain the Grand Republic made a big show, and it will not be forgotten by the persons who saw them. em.

"I have the largest shipment of cigars ever received in Atlanta—something over 300,000."
"Yes, I guess they will last you a long time, too?"

and I will have to make another order. "Do you sell them here in Atlanta?"
"I sell to merchants in the southeastern states, and, of course, Atlanta gets her share, A greatmany of these cigars are already sold, and it will not take long to finish the rest."

"You must have several men on the road, then; do you not?" "Crtainly. A tobacco concern that does the business I do is compelled to travel several good men. My drummers go over the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama, and sell a great many goods in these

"You say the Grand Republic cigar is a good one, "Yes; the best five-cent cigar on the market. In fact, it is really a good ten-cent cigar. Many cigars are being advertised and sold in this city right now for ten cents that are not as good as the Grand Republic, and it sells for only five cents."

"The fact that it is such a good cigar accounts, then, for its popularit?"

"The fact that it is such a good cigar accounts, then, for its popularity?"

"Just so. It is given to the people on its merits, and is strictly a long Havana filler. Then, again, it is kejt fully up to the standard, and no 'shoddy' and 'made-to-sell' goods are used in its manufacture. Yes, sir, the Grand Republic is the cigar of today."

Upon the strength of this, The Constitution representative thought he would try one, and found them the 'grand cigar that they had been represented to be.

Canadian Catarrh Cure Co.:

Gentlemen—My wife was a great sufferer with Catarrh for over two years. She has been a little troubled ever since she was a child with the disease. About two years ago we were in Mississippi, and while there she was taken down with catarrhal fever; we had three of the best physicians we could get. They broke the fever and left her the worst case of catarrh of the head I ever saw. Her nose ran profusely, and for a year I despaired of her ever getting well. I tried several doctors and they could not cure her, and used every catarrh remedy I could hear of. I spent over $60 the past year for remedies, and all to no effect. At last it became so offensive that you could hardly remain where she was. I offered $1,000 to any doctor who would cure her (and that would have left us homeless), but I would not have cared for that if she could only be cared. We saw an advertisement in the Atlanta Constitution of "Canadian Catarrh Cure," and thought we would try it, and went to your office, when you gave my wife a small sample bottle of your remedy, and told us to come and get a large bottle when that was out. I bought the large bottle, and before she had used all of the bottle she was entirely well, and her health fully restored, and now does more work than any woman I know. She used the medicine over six months ago, and there has not been the sightest return or the disease. I hope everybody that has catarrh may find you and be cured. I am a traveling man and have told a great many of your wonderful cure. Yours truly,

WHO BURNT COLUMBIA?

General Sherman or Wade Hampton?

thern Historical Society.

The coarse, vulgar attack which General Sherman has recently made upon the chivalric soldier, and hightoned gentleman, General Wade Hampton—charging him with the burning of Columbia, and using about him billingsgate that only recoils on its author—reopens a question that has been several times settled, and gives occasion for placing on record once more the proofs that W. T. Sherman was guilty of the burning of Columbia, and has tried of the burning of Columbia, and has tried to shirk the responsibility of the infamous act by a series of falsehoods absolutely unparalleled

He burned Atlanta and Rome, and gloried in "making Georgia howl," as he "smashed things generally to the Sea." He disolated South Carolina in a man-per thus described by a committee of citizens of Columbia, appointed to take the sworn affi-dayits of the west trustworthy and reliable davits of the most trustworthy and reliable

"Foreighty miles along the route of his army, through the most highly improved and cultivated region of the state, according to the testimony of intelligent and respectable witnesses, the habitations of but two white persons remained. As he advanced the villages of Harde villa, Grahamville, [Gillson-wille, McPhersonville, Bankwille, Bidlson-wille, McPhersonville, Entwell, Blackwille, Midway, Orangeburg and Lexington were successively devoted to the itames, indignities and outrages were perpetrated upon the persons of the inhabitants, the implements of agriculture were broken, dwellings, barns, mills, and gin-houses were consumed, provisions of every description appropriated or destroyed, horses and mules onaried away, and sheep, cattle, and hogs were either taken for actual use or shot down and left behind: The like dewastation marked the progress of the invading army from Columbia through this state to its northern frontier, and the Lowns of Winnsboro, Camden and Cheraw suffered from like visitation by fire. If a single town or village or hamlet within their line of march escaped altogether the toreh of the invaders the committee have not been informed of the exception. The line of General Sherman's march from his entering the territory of the state up to Columbia, and from Columbia, and from Columbia, the North Carollina before, was one con-

General Sherman has been, however, unfortunate in not sticking to one version of the affair, but in giving first one and then another explanation of the burning of Columbia as might suit his purpose at the time. 1. The hight of the fire and the next day General Sherman admitted to the mayor, to Rev. J. Loomer Porter, and to others who testify to the fact under oath [see report of the committee, Southern Historical Society Papers, volume viii., pp. 1202-214] that his men did burn the city, but claimed that they did it under the influence of liquor, which they found in the stores and residences.

2. In his official report of the event itself in 1865, General Sherman says: "And without hesitation, I charge General Wade Hampton with having burned his own city of Columbia, not with a mallcious intent, but from folly and want of sense in filling it with lint cotton and tinder."

tinder."

3. In a letter to the Washington Chronicle, in 1873, he says: "I reiterate that no matter what his (General Hanpton's) orders were, the men of his army, either his rear-guard or his stragglers, did spply the fire, and that this was a sufficient cause for all else that followed."

4. In his memoirs, published in 1875, he iers or not is not material), which fire was ritially subdued early in the day by our men; at when night came, the high wind fanued it ain into full blaze, carried it against the ame houses, which caught like tinder, and on spread beyond our control. In my offil report of this confiagration, I distinctly arred it to General Wade Hampton, and nfess I did so pointedly, to shake the faith his people in him, for he was, in my opin-a people in him, for he was a people in him, for he confess I did so pointedly, to shake the faith of his people in him, for he was, in my opinion, a braggart, and professed to be the special champion of South Carolina." Could a man possibly write himself to lower depths of infamy than this unblushing confession of Sherman in his own book that he deliberately made in his official report a false charge against Wade Hampton in order "to shake the faith of his people in him?" If it is equaled in all history, I am not aware of it.

5. General Sherman's latest utterwice again.

history, I am not aware of it.

5. General Sherman's latest utterance again, in the coarsest language, charges General Hampton with burning Columbia.

Now, the proof is overwhelming that all of these statements of General Sherman are false, and that he was guilty of allowing his men to burn Columbia without using any effort to brevent the diabolical outrage, even if he did not himself order or instigate it.

The following letter from General Wade Hampton settles the question with all who know his high sense of honor and the moral impossibility of his making statements which lie cannot prove:

impossibility of his making statements in the cannot prove:

Wild Woods, Miss., April 21, 1856.—To Hon. Reverdy Johnson, United States Senate: Sir—A few days ago I saw in the published proceedings of congress that a petition from Benjamin Kawles, of Co fumble, South Cerolina, asking compensation for the destruction of his house by the federal army in February, 1855, had been presented to the senate, accompanied by a letter from Major-General Sherman, uses the following no hesitation in saying that he was the cause of the distraction of your city."

This same charge, made against me by General Sherman, having been brought before the senate of the United States, I am naturally most solicitous to vindicate myself before the same tribunal. But my state has no representative in that body. Those who should be her consonstitutional representatives and exponents there are none who have the right to speak for the country more to participate in the legislation which governs her; none to impose the axes she is called agon to pay, and none to vindicate her sons from misrepresentation, injustice or slander.

Under these circumstances I appeal to you, in the confid. It hope you will use every effort to see that justice is done in this matter.

I deny, emphatically, that any cotton was fired in Columbia by my order. I deny that the citizens "set fire to thousands of bales rolled out into the streets." I deny that any cotton was on fire when the federal troops entered the city. I meet respectfully ask of congress to appoint a committee, charged with the duty of excertaining and reporting all the facts connected with the destruction of Columbia, and thus fixing upon the proper author of that enormous crime the Infamy he richly deserves. I am willing to submit the cess to any honest tribunal. Before any such I pledge myself to prove that I gave a positive order, by direction of General Beauregard, that no cotton beneathed.

committee of investigation asked by the gal-lant Hampton was summarily refused by General Sherman's friends. They did not dare to go into a fair investigation.

And now for the proofs of General Sherdenoral Sherman's Henus.

And now for the proofs of General Sherman's guilt.

As secretary of the Southern Historical society for fifteen years and editor of fourteen volumes of S. H. S. papers, I had occasion to publish these proofs in detail, and any one desiring to see them in full can find them in those volumes. I can, of course, only give them here in brief outline.

1. General Sherman avowed his purpose of destroying Columbia long before hejreached the city. This is proved by a number of witnesses, but the following extracts from the official records settles it beyond all peradventure:

On page 227, of volume first, of the "supplemental report of the joint committee on the conduct of the war," published officially by the government, are these words, in a dispatch dated December 18, 1864, from Major-General H. W. Halleck, in Washington, to General Sherman, then in Savannah: "Should you capture Charleston I hope that by some accident the place may be destroyed, and if a little salt should be sown upon its site it may prevent the growth of future crops of nullification and secession." Are not the animus and the intention of these words perfectly clear? That they were understood and cordially concurred in by the officer to whom they were addressed is apparent from General Sherman's reply to them, which, dated December 24, 18864, contains these words: "I will bear in mind your hint as to Charleston, and don't think salt will be necessary. When I move, the Fifteenth corps will be on the right of the right wing, and their position will bring them naturally into Charleston first; and if you have watched the history of that corps, you will have remarked that they generally do their work up pretty well. The truth is, the whole army is burning with an insatiable desire to wreak vengeance upon South Carolina. I almost tremble at her fate, but feel that she deserves all that seems in store for her. * * * I lock-upon Columbia as quite as bad as Charleston."

General Sherman here fully indorses the suggestion for the de out simultaneously in different parts of the city.

3. In his testimony before the "mixed claims commission" General Sherman said that his men were under perfect discipline, and he could have restrained them, but that while he feared they would burn Columbia he would not restrain them to their ranks to save every city in South Carolina.

4. In the presence of Governor Orr and several other witnesses, in the governor's office in Columbia in 1867, General O. O. Howard said to General Hampton that General Sherman knew perfectly well that he (Hampton) did not burn Columbia; that no one was authorized to say that "our troops did not set fire to it, for I saw them do it myself." Governor Orr testified concerning the conversation: "General Howard said, in substance, that the city was burned by United States troops; that he saw them fire many houses." Colonel Kennedy, of the skirmish line, which 5. Entered Columbia at 35° clock that morning and one of General Sherman's savorite witnesses testifies as follows: "I cannot, for my life, see how Wade Hampton and Beauregard are so positive that Sherman's soldiers first set fire to the cotton, for not one was near it when the fire first started, and certainly neither Hampton nor Beauregard were within gunshot of either the cotton or the state house." This "swift witness" proves too much for his chief, who was trying to connect Hampton with the burning of the cotton.

But Colonel Stone, who received the surren-

But Colonel Stone, who received the surren o'clock, testines in the mayor as early as 10 o'clock, testines in the most emphatic manner that the fire did not begin until 9 o'clock that night, and that then: "All at once fifteen or twenty flames, from as many different places along the river, shot up, and in ten minutes the fate of Columbia was realed."

along the river, shot up, and in ten minutes the fate of Columbia was sealed."

6. Adjutant Byers, in his "What I Saw in Dixie: or Sixteen Months in Rebel Prisons," says of the scenes of that fearful night: "The boys, too, were spreading the conflagration by firing the city in a hundred places."

As General Sherman witnessed these scenes he doubtless rejoiced in the thought that his prophecy to Halleck had been fulfilled, and that the Fifteen corps had "done their work up pretty well."

from the city prisons had formed a society, to which had been added many members from our soldiers and the negroes, the object of which society was to burn Columbia." And yet neither he, nor Sherman, nor Howard, nor anyone in authority took any steps whater to prevent what they knew was impending.

9. General Sherman suppresses, in his official report, all his correspondence between the 16th and 21st February, 1865, and there is thus left very strong presumptive proof that his left very strong presumptive proof that his letters and orders of those dates con-tained matter at variance with his subsequent statement concerning the burning of Columbia.

10. The testimony of Captain Rawlins Lowndes, Hampton's A. A. G., that so far from issuing orders to burn the cotton (as Sherman asserts) Hampton sought authority from General Beauregard and issued orders that the cotton should not be burned, and the statements of General M. C. Butler and other confederates who were the last to leave Columbia, as the federal advance came in, that no cotton was fired or was burning when Sherman's army entered the city, are perfectly conclusive on these points.

was fired or was burning when Sherman's army entered the city, are perfectly conclusive on these points.

"The pure and gifted chancellor, J. B. Carroll, who, as chairman of the committee appointed to investigate this whole question wrote the report, based on a very large amoun, of unimpeachable testimony, has an able and exhaustive statement of the case [see S. H. 8. papers, vol. VII. pp. 202-214] which, beyond all question, fixed the responsibility of the barning of Columbia on General Sherman, and adduced in proof facts which cannot be denfed. I have space for only the following brief extract, which will serve to show the character of the report:

That Columbia was burned by the soldiers of General Sherman, that the vast majority of the incendiaries were sober, that for hours they were seen with combustibles firing house after house, without any affectation of concentment, and without the alignest check from their officer, is established by proof full to repleition, and wearfsome from its very superfluity. After the destruction of the town his officers and men openly approved of its burning and exalted in it. "I saw," deposes the mayor, "very few dramken soldiers that night; many who appeared toxympathies with our people told me that he fate and doom of Columbia had been common talk around their camp-fires ever since they left Savannah." It was said by numbers of the soldiers that the order had been given to burn down the city. There is strong evidence that such an order was actually issued in relation to the house of General John A. Preston.

It seems that General Sherman does not propose to let this question rest—that having utterly fatled in his attempt to injune Hampton "with his people," and having his malignant nature constantly aroused by seeing the gallant South Carolinian occupy the highest posts within the gift of his devoted people, he means to reiterate his base slander until, possibly, he may persuade himself and his brother John to believe it.

Well! let him continue his course. The his-may persuade himself and his brother John to believe it.

Well! let him continue his course. The historian of the future will rank this alongside of the slander he uttered against President Davis, and for which he received so merciless an excoriation at the hands of the confederate chief, and in which he pillorles Sherman for all time by saying: "I have in this vindication, not of myself only, but also of the people who honored me with the highest official position in their gift, been compelled to group together instances of repeated falsehoods, deliberately spoken and written by General Sherman—the Blair-Bost slander of myself, the defamation of the character of General Albert Sidney Johnston, the disparagement of the military fame of General Grant, and the shameful and corrupt charge against General Hampton."

SHOT WITH A PISTOL A Negro Boy Sends a Bullet Into a Companion. Three Small Boys go Hunting and Quarrel Over the Game—One Shoots the Henry Markham, a negro boy thirteen years of age, was shot and dangerously wounded yes-terday morning by James Franklin, a negro

The shooting was without provocation.

Markham's home is at No. 42 Martin street, while Franklin's place is near by. Early yesterday morning the two boys, accompanied by another named Tucker, went hunting. Franklin had a single-barrel shotgun and a small twenty-two caliber pistol, and Markham carried an old musket. The negroes spent the morning near Grant park, and about noon started home. They reached Franklin's house first, where the game was divided, and where Franklin left his igun. From Franklin's home they went to Markham's, where they became involved in a dispute over a bird. The quarrel soon became so bitter that Franklin called Markham a liar.

"All right," answered Markham' "I'll take "Then you'll take more," said Franklin.

As he spoke, Franklin struck at Markhan

"Then you"ll take more," said Franklin.

As he spoke, Franklin struck at Markham. Markham attempted to ward the blow, where upon Franklin pulled the pistol from his hip pocked and fired. The first ball passed through the boy's hat, and Franklin fired again. As he pulled the trigger the second time he was advancing upon Markham and was only a few feet away. The ball struck Markham in the stomach, and throwing up his hands, he yelled:

Oh Lordy, Lordy; you have killed me."

The boy dropped to the ground and Franklin advanced upon him with the pistol cocked for a third shot, and was prevented from sending a second ball into Markham's body by some women who had heard the shooting and seen nearly all the trouble. The women aided by a man carried the boy into his home when a messenger was sent for a physician.

In a few minutes after the shooting Franklin stood watching what was going on. Then he went to his home and pleking up the old single barrel shotgin returned to Markham's home. With the gun thrown over his shoulder he marched up and down the street in front of Markham's home, threatening to kill anybody who interfered with him. The shooting attracted quite a crowd, and the boy's conduct created an intense excitement. Everybody seemed afraid to take hold of him, and he held complete control of the neighborhood until Dr. Beuson arrived, when he went to his home. The doctor found that the ball had entered the boy's stomach and passing through the body in a direct line lodged under the skin near the spine. He pronounced the boy's condition as extremely dangerous, and sent information of the affair to police headquarters. Mounted Officers Goodson and Steerman went out to investigate the matter. They went through the neighborhood in which Franklin lived but without finding him. His house was carefully searched and the gun found, but the boy could not be found. After the officers had left the neighborhood the boy came out of a house directly across the street from his home and skipped out. The search was continued un

Most of the papers were bills for collection, and one of them was on an Alabama street merchant.

"Do you know where Baldwin is?"
"No, we do not. I shouldn't be surprised, though, to know that he is working the same scheme somewhere else. burglar, gave Patrolmen Harris and Hudson a terrible fight about three o'clock yesterday morning.

The trouble occurred on Wheat street.
Patrolmen Harris and Hudson are members of the morning watch, and go on duty at one o'clock. Their first duty is an examination of the doors to business houses on the fronts of their beats. After discharging that duty, the men take in the other portions of their beats at leisure. The patrolmen went through their work as usual after going on duty night before last. and about three o'clock were moving along Wheat street. When they were near Calhoun street they encountered two negro men, both of whom were carrying packages. The negroes objected to being questioned, and attempted to move on, but the officers considered their conduct suspicious, and ordered them to halt. Instantly the negroes started to run. The officers were close behind them and had no difficulty in overtaking them. Hudson gathered one and Harris the other. The negroes quickly showed fight, and in less than a second two rough and tumble battles were in full progress on the sidewalk. Hudson succeeded in dropping his man. The one Harris tackled, however, was a horough athlete and the fight was a hard one. The negroe warded off the officer's club, and, drawing a pistol, attempted to use it. The officer, however, succeeded in striking him across the hand in which he held his pistol, and the weapon dropped to the ground. Though disarmed, the negro continued Though disarmed, the negro continued to fight, and finally escaped the officer's clutches. The instant the negro found himself at liberty he made a hard run, and succeeded in getting away, although classity followed by the others.

Hudson's prisoner, though underneath, continued to fight, and made several attempts to use a knife. The free use of the club, however, finally conquered him, and when Patrolman Harris returned from the 'chase after his prisoner, Patrolman Hudson arose from the ground, drawing his prisoner after him. The two officers picked up the packages and led the prisoner to police headquarters, where he was recognized as Will Crosby, a well known desperate character. The prisoner declined to desperate character. The prisoner declined to talk, but the two officers felt satisfied that they knew the man who was with him, and later in the night arrested John Johnson. Johnson, however, denied knowing anything about the Matter.

Yesterday was the day set for the trial of Green Jackson, the negro husband of Susie Dunning, upon the charge of receiving stolen property. The case was to have been tried before Judge Tanner, but in his absence was carried before Judge Manning.

The two Dunning girls had been subpensed by the defense, represented by Mr. Frank Walker, and the general interest felt in the disposal of the case caused the courtroom to be packed. The elder of the two sisters was reserved and respectable in herlmanner, while the younger one, Susie, was quite the reverse. She kept up a continuous giggling during the hearing, and her general manner might have been defined as idiotic.

Mr. J. F. O'Neal, representing the prosecution, moved that the case be continued, upon the ground that Mrs. Dunning was unable to be present, and a short delay was expected to bring some valuable information from Springfield, Ill., where Susie Dunning and Jackson were married in January.

Mr. Walker, in opposing the motion, stated that the reason Mrs. Dunning could not be present was that she was on a big spree, and doubtless would be for some time.

The two sisters regarded this as a meritorious piece of wit, and the younger one was especially demonstrative.

"Moreover," continued Mr. Walker, "this boy will be compelled to wait in jail—""'It's a shame," interrupted Susie, savagely. "He's been in there too long, anyhow. It was my money, and he's my hasband, and I had a right to give it to him."

This sentiment was duly applauded by the seventy-five or hundred negroes in the room. Green Jackson's mother was particularly pleased at the outburst of her daughter-in-law. It was some time before tho woman was quieted down. When the judge decided to postpone the case until Tuesday afternoon, the wife went wild. She seemed quite at home among the negroes, and it was to a group of them that her remarks were addressed. DEAD ON A TRACK.

A Negro Found Badly Mutilated on the Rails.

Switchman Makes a Discovery Which Induces the Belief that Murder Has Been Done.

A negro man was found dead upon the Western and Atlantic road about ten o'clock last night, and the indications are that he was killed and placed upon the track in order that the work of the engine might forever hide a The negro is known as Willis McLelland.

Just before ten o'clock a switchman, who was working with a yard engine, was walking up the track to change alswitch. The switch was very near Marietta street, and directly in front of the Karwisch building on Marietta and Pine streets. As the flagman approached the switch he observed a heap upon the track, which he took at first to be a bundle of old clothing. Throwing his foot under the heap he attempted to push it from the track, but it did not move. The resistence with which the flagman's foot met convinced him instantly he was not kicking a bundle of rags. Throw ing his lantern forward the flagman discovered that he had kicked a man who had been killed, and an alarm was quickly given. In a few minutes a large crowd congregated and in the crowd was a dozen lanterns. By the light of the lanterns the crowd discovered an old negro man lying across the track. Both legs had been crushed in two not officers. His clothing, was now the sight was an extremely disagreeable one. At first it was supposed that the man had been run over by an engine and killed but in a short time another theory was advanced. Among others who were drawn to the place was a negro man who recognized the dead negro as Willis McLelland with whom he claimed kin. The negro discovered an ugly wound upon McLelland's head and instantly claimed that he had been hit over the head with a club, killed and then placed on the track to hide the murder. Instantly the theory began to spread, and in a short time the crowd was doubled, and the feeling began to run high. he was not kicking a bundle of rags. Throw to spread, and in a short time the crowd was doubled, and the feeling began to run high. Intelligence of the affair was sent into police headquarters, and Call Officer Moncrief and Captain Couch went out. They found the crowd terribly excited, and at once began to work upon the matter. The captain succeeded in ascertaining that the negro had been seen on Marietta street, near Haiman's plow factory, about thirty minutes before the flagman found the dead body. The scar on the head was carefully examined by the officers. They were unable to tell whether it had been made by a lick with a stick or by the engine, but were unable to tell whether it had been made by a lick with a stick or by the engine, but were inclined to think the engine had done the deed. After securing all the information possible Captain Couch surrendered the dead body to the relatives, by whom it was removed to Tanyard branch. Immediately after the body had been removed, other parties came up who claimed that the dead man was not Willis McLelland, but Horace Wright, an idiotic negro, well known in Atlanta.

ATLANTA, Ga., March I.—Personally I dislike to refer to the meeting of physcians which was held in this city some nights ago, called to discuss the subject of the need of a large hospital in this city to be built and supported at the expense of the city. I attended said meeting because it was cailed by the relief committee, supposing that the committee wanted to get disinterested arguments and facts. I went, therefore, simply as an individual citizen to give my views, and used no log rolling

I did give my views at the meeting, confining my remarks closely to the text as presented in a resolution which was, as to the actual need of a large hospital in the city, based mainly on the assertion that Atlanta was the largest city in the assertion that Atlanta was the largest city in the country that did not have a large hospital. I replied to this latter point that if true it furnished no sufficient reason for the building of a hospital; that, unless it could be shown that the hospitals already here were overcrowded, or had not sufficient capacity to accommodate the indigent sick, the council would indict an unnecessary burden upon the taxpayers in erecting such a hospital. I showed by incontestable facts that the Ivy Street hospital, not to mention St. Joseph's infirmary, could accommodate 100 patients, and that the largest number ever sent by the city had not exceeded an average of six white and thirteen colored. contestable facts that the Ivy Street hospital, not to mention St. Joseph's infirmary, could accommodate 100 patients, and that the largest number ever sent by the city had not exceeded an average of six white and thirteen colored patients per month. I further showed that this hospital had been established by the benevolent ladies of the city at a time when the city had no place for the sick, and that it was tendered by the laddes in writing to the council and accepted, they promising to use it when needed, but it was nearly a year before there was any need by the city for space to accommodate a patient. Finally, when the city did need it, they made with the hospital authorities a contract to pay for each patient 75 cents per day; and any number of colored patients sent by the authorities, the definite sum of $125 per month of sufficient to cover the entire running expense, was accepted and is now in force the defect being supplied by the charity of good ecople and the proceeds derived from a few postents coming in from accidents on reliroads, and other points mostly outside of the city, the medical services being rendered gratuitously by the faculty of the Southern Medical college, through an arrangement secured by the ladies before they deeded the property to tno trustees. These facts make it evident that the object of these ladies was a benevolent one, and has greatly inued to the blessing of the sick and to the financial benefit of the city, and proves, as I argued, that there is positively no real need or necessity for a large hospital to be erected at a heavy outlay and supported at the expense of the city. My argument was confined wholly to the question of need, and not as to whether this city was able, or as to whether the council had a right to build such a hospital, ignoring the fact and disregarding the efforts of the ladies and those who are now supplying abundant hospital facilities for five times as many as the city needs and at rates half that the same number would cost in a city Lospital where a moved, other parties came up who claimed that the dead man was not Willis McLelland, but Horace Wright, an idiotic negro, well known in Atlanta.

As physicians and surgeons on the regular staff of the Ivy Street hospital, we have attended all the sick poor among the blacks, and a majority of the whites requiring hospital treatment at the hands of the city. The average number per month of white patients in the hospital has been less than six for the last three years, and at all times we could have accommodated three times this number of white city patients without interfering with our private patients received from the railroads and other sources. In the wards of the colored quarter, though at times a little crowded, we have never lacked for room.

In view of the exceedingly favorable contract (for the city) now in force with the Ivy street hospital, we see no reason from the standpoint of economy and necessity, that the city, or any group of her citizens, from motives of benevolence and enlarged humanity, wish to build a large hospital we certainly will not oppose it.

To the Musical Public of Atlanta.

It is about five years now since a genius departed from this world, leaving behind a costly heirioom, a treasure of beauty and truth, sublime, precious and imperishable! His name was Richard Wagner. A world has done homage to his genius, and all grades of music have submitted to the overwhelming truth of his art principles: from the height of grand opera down to the humblest dance music; from the orchestral symphony to the small piane piace, his influence can be traced, and the art temples, principally devoted to the cultivation and inforest of Wagneriam art—numerons as they are—still increase daily in number and significance. A retrospective glance at the musical events of Atlanta during the past seasons has convinced me that—thanks to the activity of our excellent local musiciaus—our musical life has reached such a state of gavenement that we should no longer hesitate to form the acquaintance with the immortal works of Richard Wagner, and thus place us (musically) on a comparative level with the largest cities of the world. Being intimately acquainted with his works, and—which is only natural—being also an ardent admirer of them, I should be very glad to introduce them in Atlanta by way of a Wagner fasival, the proceeds of which I should partly dedicate to the benefit of the "Women's Industrial union."

Many of our best vocalists have promised their co-operation; in fact the solo parts are already distributed, and also for the chorus I have be n hapfy to receive the promise of many ladies and gentlemen; but still more are requested, and in order to accelerate my project, I most respectfully invite all who wish to join in the chorus for the festival to meet on Thursday, the 8th of this month, at 8 p. m., at the musical hall of the Atlanta female institute. ple of less favored climes and soils do not flock to it and embrace its advantages?

Simply because its advantages have not widely and persistently been made known to the outside world. Its light has been hidden under a bushel. By reason of an unwise provision in its constitution, its legislators have been forbidden to appropriate money to advertise its great resources and invite immigration. It is true that within the past few years some few communities have made fitful attempts to induce immigration by the publication, in pamphlets and circulars of the advantages of their particular sections, but the circulation of these pamphlets and circulars have naturally been limited and intermittent, and the few enterprising individuals who have gotten them up became discouraged, and relaxed their efforts. Then, again, the railroads of the south have generally failed to co-operate in any movement looking toward immigration, and our people could not offer the inducement of low rates to those who had an inclination to visit our state and examine for themselves its resources. Having to contend against the natural flow of emigration to the west, which has persistently flooded the thickly populated middle states with most gorgeously painted descriptions of its advantages and offered the most liberal inducements in the way of cheap rail road rates, it is little wohder that the advantages offered by Georgia have been passed by and immigration to our state has been small.

A BUREAU OF INMIGRATION.

The Central will furnish the necessary funds to meet the expenses of this bureau and aid it with all the transportation facilities at its command. The State Agricultural society will furnish the burea, with all the necessary information regarding the agricultural productions of the state, the character of the soil and its adaptability to the raising of the various crops, live stock, etc., the price of lands, social advantages, and aid in showing intending settlers around and making them welcome. The efforts of the bureau will not be confined to the territory traversed by the lines of the Central, but will extend over the whole state, no partiality being shown any section.

WHAT IT PROPOSES TO DO In order to at first call the attention of peo-ple seeking new homes, it is proposed to pub-lish a monthly eight-page paper, to be called "The Southern Empire," in which will be "The Southern Empire," in which will be given a general description of the agricultural, mineral, timber, and manufacturing resources of the state, together with such statistics as may prove valuable and interesting. In addition to this general description, each county will be asked to furnish a brief description of its advantages and inducements to settlers, its products, woods, minerals, price of lands, etc., so as to give every locality an interest in the movement and a fair showing in the benefits that may accrue. Of course, no one issue can contain all this inforcourse, no one issue can contain all this infor

There will also be published a condensed list of lands for sale in different sections of the state, so as to show what farms and timber land can actually be purchased for. A department of the paper will be devoted to answering inquiries of people from other states who are looking toward (secrgia with a view to making it their home. From 5,000 to 10,000 copies of this paper will be printed each month, and they will be mailed to the addresses of farmers and others throughout the northern states.

Through the influence and efforts of the Central road, low rates will be secured for land seekers in small parties, and every opportunity be afforded them to examine the country. Excursions will be organized from time to time, and every advantage taken of low rates to induce home seekers to come down and see the advantages we offer. Correspondence will be opened and kept up with persons at a number of points throughout the north; circulars, papers and pamphelts mailed to parties who are known to be desirous of changing their residence, and effort made to attract attention to our state.

In order to show to the fullest extent the agricultural resources of Georgia, large excursions will be organized in various sections of the north, and brought down to the state fair next fall. I went, therefore, simply as an individual citizen to give my views, and used no log rolling or other means to drum up a crowd favoring my special views which I am informed was done by some of those advocating a large and expensive hospital.

THE HOSPITAL QUESTION.

I did give my views at the meeting, confining my emarks closely to the text as presented in resolution which was, as to the actual need of a large hospital in the city, based mainly on the issertion that Atlanta was the largest city in the country that did not have a large hospital. I resolided to this latter point that if true it furnished no unfficient reason for the building of a hospital; that, the latter were overcrowded, or had not sufficient capacity to accommodate the indigent sick, the council here were overcrowded, or had not sufficient capacity to accommodate the indigent sick, the council vould inflict an unnecessary burden upon the taxayers in erecting such a hospital. I showed by innontestable facts that the Ivy Street hospital, not to mention St. Joseph's infirmary, could accommodate 90 patients, and that the largest number ever sent by the city had not exceeded an average month. I further showed that this hospital had een established by the benevolent ladies of the ity at a time when the city had no place for the ick, and that it was tendered by the ladies in writing to the council and accepted, they promising to left when needed, but it was nearly a year before here was any need by the city for space to accommodate a patient. Finally, when the city did need to they made with the hospital authorities a commodate a patient. Finally, when the city did need to they are cach patient 76 cents per day; and my number of colored patients sent by the city menostrated that this amount, though not inflicient to cover the entire running expense, has accepted and is now in force; the defect eing supplied by the charity of good people and the rocceds derived from a few patients coming in nom accidents on railroads, and other points mostly utside of the city, the medical services being renerated when the city of the southern tedical college, through an arrangement secured the ladies before they deeded the property to tho crustes. These facts make it evident that the obsert of these ladies was a benevolent one, and has really inued to the blessiog of the sick and to the nancial benefit of the city, and proves, as I argued, hat there is positively no real need or necessity for large hospital to be erected at a heavy outlay and Knowing these things and having labored thirty years, daily, for Atlanta and her interests, how could I homestly, with my hand on my heart, make any other argument? I am willing to leave it to the true friends of Atlanta, to those who are willing to labor and sacrifice in her interests, to say whether or not I am right or wrong in this matter. I do not mean to say that Atlanta has not the right or the power to build a magnificent hospital, or that the day may not come when she will find it to her interest to do so. I do not say that she has no right to gratify her pride and ambition to compare favorably in liberal measures with other cities. I do not say that she han other right to erect a vast charitable institution, to accommodate the pauper patients of 150 doctors in Atlanta, as some have claimed that she should do, and to cause an influx of hundreds of pauper from the surrounding country to live upon her bountry; but I do, say that such action would not, in my judgment, now be wise or expedient or just to the already over burdened taxpayers of this city. I certainly have no objection, if the city is perpendicularly have no objection, if the city is perpendicularly have no objection, if the city is prepared t of low rates to those who had an inclination to visit our state and examine for themselves its resources. GEORGIA ON WHERES.

A special car, handsomely decorated, will be fitted up, and in it will be placed a condensed exhibit of the products of Georgia—agricultural, mineral, woods, and manufacturing. This car will be sent north next fall and the exhibit shown at the various state and district fairs, and at the same time there will be distributed such pamphlets, circulars and papers as the counties may contribute, thus affording each locality an excellent means of advertising its resources.

A MAMMOTH EXCURSION.

In order to show to the fullest extent the agricultural resources of Georgia, large excursions will be organized in various sections of the north, and brought down to the state fair next fall. After the excursionists have looked upon and studied this aggregate display, an opportunity will be afforded them to visit any and all portions of the state that they may wish, at low transportation rates. This will be a great inducement for counties to make fine displays, for, naturally, the excursionists will be attracted to those counties making fine exhibits.

WHO WILL MANAGE IT.

The bureau of immigration has been placed in charge of Mr. W. L. Glessner, of Americus, who it will be remembered so successfully managed a series of excursions from Ohio a couple of years ago, and who has been unceasing in his efforts to induce immigration to this state. With his experience and large acquaint-auce throughout the north, we have every reason to expect a great measure of success from his management. His headquartars will be in

AN IMPORTANT UNDERTAKING. AN IMPORTANT UNDERTAKING.—
The organization of this bureau is a most important undertaking to the people of this state, and it ought to receive their hearty support and earnest co-operation. It is what has long been needed and the management of the Central railroad deserve the thanks of the people for the broad views with which it has inaugurated this work and its substantial liberality in sustaining it.

FAILURE IN BUSINESS.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN TEA COMPANY / MAKE AN ASSIGNMENT.

On the morning of the 29th ultimo there arrived the representative of the well known tea and coffee house of Ross W. Weir and W. P. Roome & Co., of New York city, who were the main creditors of the Great Southern Tea and Coffee house of this city. The main cause of the failure is attributed to high rent and close competition. The gentlemen who had charge of this popular establishment are gentlemen of the highest business worth and integrity and came here shortly after the great exposition to assume control and management of the business.

They are connoisseurs in their line, understand teasl and coffees as well if not better than many of their more successful competitors and we regret exceedingly to chronicle the disaster that has overtaken them. Mr. Weir, brottler of Ross W. Weir, of New York city, has been appointed receiver of the stock, and will oispose of the entire stock, consisting of the highest grade teas and coffees, to the highest plader. In a conversation with Mr. Weir, he said:

"Allanta is one of the most enterprising cities I have ever seen, end I marvel that the success of the enterprise has not been gratifying. One thing, though, I notice quite a stir here among a tea and coffee houses, and presume the whole solution of this failure consists in the close prices these goods are sold for, and no three tea and coffee houses can exist upon such close profits in a city with only 80,000 people, besides there being three regular tea and coffee houses there, all the small grocers of the city handle teas and coffee, and of course this curtails both sales and profits."

"What w.il you do with the stock."

"Thave been to see one of your most enterprising houses here and think before night I shall negotiate a trade with them to take the whole stock.

Bargains, Bargains. The failure of the Great Southern Tea and Coffee house of Atlanta has thrown the whole city into a commotion. The following explains itself: commotion. The following explains itself:

Their spring and summer noveliles from Europe are now in port and lying in New York harbor.

Mr. I. C. Biesenthal left Thursday morning with Madam Grosruth for New York, being the third trip this season. They will meet their buyer who has just returned from Europe, and has brought with him all the leading novelties from Paris, London, Vienna and Berlin. As both these gentlemen, as well as Madam Grosruth, are experts in the millinery business, they expect to show to their numerous friends and customers, not only the leading novelties, but the handsomest mattern hats that Aflanta and the south have ever seen.

Coupled with this, the northern factories will be visited so that the most chaste and spicy things will be brought away that money and art can afford.

Their millinery establishment is one of the largest in the country, their goods being sold throughour the entire southern states.

They never buy from jobbers; all their goods are bought from first hands, and never see daylight until they are put on exhibition in their establishment.

Their stock will be doubled this season. They cordially extend the compliments of the season to their numerous patrons and friends, and in a few weeks they will show you the leading millinery stock of the south.

A Card from Mr. Theo. Schumann. A bill filed by M. B. Torbett in Fulton superior court charges me with being insolvent. The tase was set by order of Judge Marshall J. Clarke for Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. I appeared with my counsel, Messrs. Hall & Hammond, at the time and place appointed, prepared to prove by abundant evidence that I was perfectly solvent, and that my assets were amply sufficient to pay, more than twice over, at their lowest cash valuation, every dollar that I owed. The complainant was not ready to go on, had no proof to substantiate his charge, and was not even present in court. His counsel moved for additional time in which to prepare his case. "This I resisted insisting that I had a right to have, at as early a day as possible, a judicial decision as to whether I was solvent or not. The court, not-withstanding my protest, continued the case until most saturday, in order to give the complaintant time to make proof of a charge to which he had sworn positively and unequivocally. Against the action of the court I make no complaint, but in view of the delay find it necessary to make this statement to the public.

CIRCULAR NO. 105

Of the Railroad Commission Excites Great Interest.

talso Stirs the Railroad Men to Make a Few Remarks About the Proposed

It excites interest in Atlanta.

Circular No. 105 of the Georgia railroad commission printed in yesterday's Constitution giving notice of the meeting to be held by the commission on Tuesday, March 13th, to consider the propriety of readjusting ond equaliz-ing the passenger fares on the railroads doing business in this state, and requesting the representatives of the railroads to be present and resentatives of the railroads to be present and give their views on the proposed action.

The announcement of Major Campbell Wallace, the chairman of the commission, that a schedule has been prepared establishing a standard of two and a half cents per mile, which will be submitted to the railroad men at the meeting, intensified the interest.

A CONSTITUTION man took a turn among the people yesterday and felt the public pulse on the important matter.

The idea not only takes with the people, but was found to be extremely popular with the masses.

was found to be extremely popular with masses.

"Why not?" exclaimed one gentleman.

"Look at the Western and Atlantic railroad. That popular line has not only reduced its passenger rate to two and a half cents a mile, but it has dropped even lower. Then there is the Georgia Midland road. People can go to Columbus now for the small sum of $2.90. Now those reductions were purely voluntary on the part of these lines, and they have been promptly met by the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia and Atlanta and West Point railroads at competing points. Surely these promptly met by the East Tennessee, virginia and Georgia and Atlanta and West Point railroads at competing points. Surely these volantary reductions in passenger fares would not have been made unless the roads making them had thought that the big cut would be to their interest. If they can stand such low reductions, why can't the other railroads in Georgia stand a two and a half a mile passenger rate? I think they can stand it, and I know the people can stand it. Indeed I have no doubt that the railroads in Georgia can make money by charging so low a passenger rate—more perhaps than they are now making at the three-cent-a-mile rate."

Said another gentleman:

"There was loud and prolonged complaint on the part of the railroads when the three-cent-a-mile rate was established by the commission. I tell you, they howled, and swore that they could make no money if it went into effect. But it did go into effect, and a short time thereafter it was shown that the earnings of the railroads under the three-cent rate increased.

time thereafter it was shown that the earnings of the railroads under the three cent rate increased, and not only that new railroads were built, just the same, although it was bellowed by the magnates that railroad building would stop in Georgia. It think that the railroads in Georgia can make money, and plenty of it, by charging two and a half cents a mile, and I hope the commission will lower the rate to that figure."

But the railroad men sing a different air.

Hear them:

m: "The railroads can't stand a two One said: "The railroads can't stand a two cents and a half per mile passenger rate. If it is put upon them by the commission they cannot afford to give the traveling public good service, such as nicely furnished coaches and neat depots. The adoption of such a rate would tend to cut off the comforts now given by the railroads in the state. And then, too, the railroads would lose money by the reduction."

the railroads would lose money by the reduction."

Another said: "Yes, let the commission reduce the passenger rate to two and a half cents per mile in Georgia, and then let the legislature pass a law compelling the people to travel on them. That will make it all right. See the point?"

Still another remarked: "Some of the railroads in Georgia could stand a lower passenger rate, but all of them could not. Take the Richmond and Danville road, for instance. There are few towns on it in this state, and the local travel over that line is much smaller than on other roads, the Georgia, the Western and Atlantic and others that might be mentioned. I tell you a two and a half cent passenger rate would hurt the Richmond and Danville and other roads in Georgia too. Three cents a mile is low enough in all conscience."

"You will find," observed still another gentleman, "that the railroads in the state will strongly oppose the lowering of the present strongly oppose the lowering of the present passenger rate by the commission, and at the meeting on the 13th an array of stubborn facts in coguent reasons will be presented against a reduction of passenger fares. Why, man, some of the railroads in Georgia could not live at a two and a half cent per mile rate—or the three new railroads now projected for Atlanta would not be completed—that sall. Besidesiall this capital would draw in its horns and quit seeking investment in Georgia railroads. Now aint it?

A PATHETIC LETTER.

From Mr. D. A. Fish, An Old Soldier, Who is Sadly in Need of Help.

Colonel W. H. Harrison, of the executive department, received the following very pathetic letter yesterday from Mr. D. A. Fish, an old soldier who lives in the town of Oglethorpe, Macon county.

thetic letter yesterday from Mr. D. A. Fish, an old soldier who lives in the town of Oglethorpe, Macon county.

Mr. Fish is not entitled to another allowance, under the maimed soldier law, until 1889.

This is a worthy object of charity, and those who feel inclined to send contributions are requested to remit by letter to Colonel W. H. Harrison, who will see to it that Mr. Fish and his family receive them.

The letter is = follows:
OGLETHORPE, Ga. Macon county, March 1, 1889—W. H. Harrison, Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Sir. I write to know if I cau draw my part of the crippled soldier's money appropriated for them this year. I drew $60 last year, the first momey I have drawn. Lam needing it, Mr. Harrison, and if there is any chance for me to get it, I would be so glad. I lost my right arm in the battle of Antietam, Maryland; married soon after the war, and have now three girls and one little boy and my wife to support. Several bad crops in succession almost ruined me, and only a short time since I had my house, smokehouse, kitchen and pantry destroyed by fire with everything we had excepting a few clothes and some bedding that myself and two daughters managed to save. Everything we had to eat was burnt up. We had to go to a neighbor's house to get something to eat. I never was in such a fix before an anothing help hadly, and do hope you can arrange it so I can send up my application for my money the state allows me. It is a small amount, I know, but now, in this, my greatest time of trouble and need, it would be a great help to me, provided I can get it.

I fought hard for our good old state, and sustained a great loss in her defense and hope that she will not neglect us now in our almost help less condition. I profess to be a Christian and a hard working man and if I can out, get a tittle help to enable me to make this corp I will be a than and if a shear we will not neglect us now in our almost help to enable me to make this corp I will be so thankful.

Mr. Harrison, if I am not allowed by law to draw anything this year, won't you please help me a lit-tle and get others of your acquaintance who you know are sympathizers with poor malmed soldiers to help me: iely me.

My case is truely a distressing one; being one my case is truely and everything lost, makes it mided hard on me and my dear wife and little chilindeed hard on my dear wife and my dear wife and little chilindeed hard on my dear wife and my de enue, Dies Very Suddenly.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Mrs. William P. Reed, Living on Jones Avenue, Dies Very Suddenly.

Mrs. Reed, wife of William P. Reed, residing at No. 41 Jones avenue, was found dead in her bed early yesterday morning.

The discovery was made by Mr. Reed.
Seven weeks ago the lady gave birth to a child, and since that time has been in delicate health. Three or four days ago, however, she began to improve, and on Friday was much better than she has been for weeks. Friday evening, after Mr. Reed reached his home from work, he talked with her until abeut half past nine o clock, when he entered an adjoining room and retired. As he left his wife she remarked: marked:
"I feel so much better, and hope to be all

"Teel so much better, and hope to be all right soon."

Soon after retiring Mr. Reed went to sleep and slept soundly until aroused by his child crying. At first he laid still presuming that Mrs. Reed would make an effort to quiet the babe. The child, however, continued to cry and Mr. Reed arose and walking into his wife's room, called her, but there was no response. He then approached the bed and laying his hand upon her forehead was in the act of calling her again when he noticed that her head was very cold. He touched her hands and they were like ice. With an undefined terror he lit the lamp quickly and approaching the bed found his wire dead and beside her his seven-weeks-old child. Mr. Reed was alone in the house with these two. He hurried out and arousing a neighbor asked for assistance. In a short time several ladies and gentlemen residing in the neighborhood had responded. Mr. Reed was, of course, unable to tell anything in addition to what has been related, and his friends thought it advisable to inform the coroner. Early in the morning Coroner Haynes went out and after a consultation with Dr. W. B. Parks, who attended the lady during her illness, decided to hold an inquest. A jury was empanelled, but nothing could be ascertained. The county physician, Dr. Robert Westmoreland made an examination of the body and then a statement. The jury returned a verdict assigning the death to natural causes.

In that time, however, large bargains are offered, and the stock will be greatly reduced, if not entirely closed out. It is useless for us here to comment on the amount and quality of goods, as well as the variety, that are to be disposed of. If there is a friend to the people in Atlanta, it is L. Snider, proprietor of The Place. He gives more and better goods for the least money than any man we know of. This closing out week will be one of special attractions, and those who miss his bargains, will miss an opportunity that seldom comes up in a lifetime. In the first place, the immense line of jeweiry, diamonds, watches, rings and everything in this line will go right down at cost. The sales in this department for the last week have been great, but nothing like what is provided for this great closing out week. Then again, there never was such bargains offered before in Atlanta in the crockery department as he will offer this, his last week. The very finest tea, dinner and bedroom sets, both decorated and plain, as well as all other articles in this line, will be offered at an unprecedented low price. You need something in this department and should get it right now, while it can be bought at an actual cost. It is perfectly useless for you to go elsewhere and pay 100 per cent more for no better goods than you can get at The Place for much less. Here also will be offered an assorted lot of glass ware, listed ware, Rodgers' best make, and almost anything you want, A penny saved is a penny made, so, act accordingly.

A penny saved is a penny made, so act accordingly.

[] ust examine his large stock of stationery, and all articles usually kept in a stationery store. It will surprise you. He has everything, and a right smart more besides. His envelopes, paper, plain, in box and fancy, blank books, pocket-books, combs, brushes, soaps, inks, and so forth, word without en!, he has in the greatest abundance, and they all will go at cost this week. Now, do you want us to urge you to go and do a good thing? We think not. The best thing you can do is to buy some of this low-priced-at-cost stationery. Here is a chance to make money by spending it, paradoxical as it may seem.

But, hold on; the half has not been told, and won't be told in this article. The line of table and pocket critiery that is offered at cost this week, is the most cutting price we have yet come across. It is actually too low to cut and you can get what you want when the figures stop at eact. Are you coing to take edvan offered at cost this week, is the most cuttling price we have yet come across. We will tell you of some more in the notions department and then is when the bottom is knocked clear out and prices is no object. If you want dolls or playthings for the children of any kind now is the things for the enduren of any kind now is the time to get them.

To tell you the truth, we could write all night and Sunday, too, and then not tell you one-bail of the good things to be found at The Place this week. Go round early, Monday. Merchants will find it to their interest to buy in job lots as they can save money. See if you can't.

The New Process of Soap Making a Complete Success—Bell's Pure Soap Company. There is one industry in this city that is destined to play an important part in her progress, and that is Bell's Pure Soap company: Mr. Jas. Bell, who has been in the soap business over ten years, has succeeded in perfecting a soap that is absolutely pure, and can be sold for much less than any other on the market of a similar character. The history of this soap is an interesting one. Mr. Bell made over 3,000 experiments before he obtained just the soap he wanted. He has spent lots of money and time, yet his labors have at last been re warded by the production of an absolutely pure soap. He began to manufacture it three years ago. The first lot was made in a common iron kettle, then in a small size tank, and now it is manufactured in their factory on Poers street. In a very short time they will leave their present quarters, and locate in a large building on Marietta street.

The company have been actively engaged at work for about one month, yet they are behind their orders by over seventeen hundred boxes. They have sold their soap from Charleston to New Mexico, and as far north as Zanesville, Ohio. In one month's time this soap has Onlo. In one months time this soap has spread over this territory. This fact is significant. It means much. It means more than we have time to set forth. The true secret of its unprecedented sale is due to its charming qualities and its purity. It will clean the most soiled garment or rug, without any detmost solved garment or rig, without any detriment whatever to it. Its ingredients are the purest. It contains 8 per cent of glycerine, and 20 per cent of cotton seed oil. Why it has such great cleansing qualities is because the manufactures know how to soponify grease, and at the same time leave considerable free alkali which appears in a considerable free alkali, which appears in a neutralized condi-tion. We mean that the alkali retains its tion. We mean that the alkali retains its cloansing properties, but has its eating qualities destroyed. The many complaints that have been made against soaps that have unusual cleansing properties, are that they eat up the fabric. With Bell's pure soap you avoid all this, as its alkali is so neutralized that it is not the least derimental. This company, as we stated in the foregoing, is selling large quantities of their goods, and several capitalists have tried to buy steek, so rapidly is their soap growing in favor. There is one thing the writer knows, and that is that is that it is the best soap ever used.

Mr. Seears, who has been connected with one of the largest soap concerns in the west, is now representing Bell's Pure Soap company, and will call on the merchants of this city and state in a few days. Mr. Seears has been brought up in the business, and says Bell's soap is the best.

THE BLOODY SHIRT

To Be Flaunted in a Wild Manner Today.

THE REPUBLICANS ON THE ALERT. A Contested Election Case to Furnish the Cue Upon Which They Will Start Up-Other News.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—[Special.]—The republicans will flaunt the bloody shirt in the house tomorrow, and the club will fall bathed in hair and blood. The elections committee will call up the McDuffie-Davidson contested election case from Alabama. The case, upon the part of the majority of the committee, will be managed by Mr. Maish, of Pennsylvania, and the minority will be championed by Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts. With the republi-cans, it is to be the old time cry of bulldozing, and negro intimidations. It is the purpose of the minority of the committee to set up a mill for the manufre ory of c mpaign thunder for use in the forthcoming election. The fact of the large negro population in the Selma district, and the handsome majority of Davidson, the democrat member, over his republican opponent, McDuffle, will serve to start up the southern outrage mill, which for so many years has been the chief stock in trade with republican politicians. Mr. Crisp. chairman of the committee, has thought it best to place the case in the hands of a northern democrat, and thereby deprive the opposi-tion from making use of capital otherwise given them, if handled by the chairman or any other southern member of the committee. In the opinion of many the case will perhaps me two or more days, and may possibly result in the creation of a special committee to be sent to Alabama to take testimony and investigate the case. At any rate it looks now as though the case is a doubtful one, as there are some eight or nine democrats who are shaky and may vote for the contestant. It is to be a political contest in all the words imply. MR. RANDALL'S BILL.

Mr. Randall's new tariff bill has just been completed, and he will probably introduce it into the house on Tuesday. In speaking of his bill today, Mr. Randall said it would be cemplete and perfect in every detail, "How long have you been working upon it?" Mr. Randali was asked.

"Two years," was the quick reply.
"It ought to be perfect after that much consideration," was suggested.
"I don't know as to that. I learn something new every day about it."
"It will not be hop, skip and jump," Mr.

Randall continued, "like the one presented by the ways and means committee on Thursday last. It will embrace the best expert evidence that could be obtained from a number of persons entirely familiar with every branch of the tariff question.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

The Measures Likely to Come Up During the Week. WASHINGTON, March 4.- The WASHINGTON, March 4.—The senate committee on appropriations intends to call up on Monday or Tuesday the urgent deficiency bill. It is expected that it will be disposed of without much delay, but should attention be called pointedly to a table of deficiencies during the series of recent years embodied in the report, a political debate may be brought on. The dependant pension bill is the unfinished business, having the right of way over everything but the appropriation bill. The undervaluation bill, which gave way a week ago to the pension bill, will he taken no as soon as the latter is disposed of.

PROHIBITIONISTS SCHEMING. An Important Line of Action Agreed

Chicago March 4.—(Special.)—An InterOcean special from Indianapolis says: "An important new line of action respecting prohibition has been practically inaugurated, with the active support of the leaders of the movement in all parts of the country, the first step of which, it is likely, will be taken in this city. It grows out of the decision of the supreme court of the United States, in the Kansas case, wherein it is asserted that the people cannot barter away the morals and health of the republic, and plainly says that the public traffic in intoxicants is against public health and life. Correspondence has been had with all the prominent workers, and it has been agreed to try and attack the constitutionality of all liceuse laws. Preparations have been completed in New York, New Jersey, and other States to bring the matter immediately to a test. In this county, the prohibitionists expect at an early day, to file with the county commissioners, a protest against the grauting of licenses to applicants for saloon powers. In case the commissioners decline to grant the petition, the result that is expected, they will appeal and carry the matter to the supreme court of the state.
